For purposes of answering your question, it may matter where the event would be in the White House. Will it be in the residence or in the work area?

On February 7, as part of our efforts to highlight the importance of tax relief, we will reunite some of the "tax families" we identified in the campaign. Tax families were people who would benefit from the Bush tax plan who greeted the then Governor at campaign events or appeared at town meetings. We want them to come to the White House for an event. Can the RNC pay for their flights up here-- as most will not be able to afford the cost of a ticket?

Jay Root , with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram has asked for certain financial information about the two of you. We will let him know the White House is not subject to FOYA. However , this raises the larger question of releasing information to the press, upon request, that is generally public information. For example, salaries are generally public information and it would be wise to have a policy of releasing such information. Karen , in Texas your policy was to always try to release information when there was need to protect it. Eventually, the financial reports we submit are subject to disclosure. I suggest we let Jay Root know this. The backup filings and divestiture agreements required by OGE may, however, be protected. We should talk before I respond to the request.

A few points:

First, you should be aware that the appropriations law enacted by Congress this year (as in past years) contains the following broad provision:

Sec. 623. No part of any funds appropriated in this or any other Act shall be used by an agency of the executive branch, other than for normal and recognized executive-legislative relationships, for publicity or propaganda purposes, and for the preparation, distribution or use of any kit, pamphlet, booklet, publication, radio, television or film presentation designed to support or defeat legislation pending before the Congress, except in presentation to the Congress itself.

The GAO has been unwilling to adopt a reading of the statute that would bar virtually all comment by officials on agency or administration policy or activities. Rather, the GAO has construed this statute in a manner similar to the Anti-Lobbying Act, 18 USC 1913. In other words, the statute prohibits appeals to members of the public suggesting that they in turn contact their elected representatives to indicate support of or opposition to pending legislation. thereby expressly or implicitly urging the legislators to vote in a particular manner.

Second, there are two considerations relevant to your inquiry whether it is appropriate to send out a draft letter that would in turn be used by a private group or individual to blast e-mail to others.

At the outset, there is a general appropriations law principle to the effect that appropriations not be expended for unauthorized purposes. While explaining and promoting the President's policies and programs is a perfectly appropriate government function, I have not found any authority or precedent suggesting that it is acceptable for the government to draft a letter for a private group that the private group would then mass mail to supporters or members. The vagueness of the appropriations principle raises concerns about its possible expansive application to a situation like this.

In addition, there are serious appearance issues raised by certain kinds of interaction between government officials and outside groups. I am far from sure it would be possible to persuasively defend a practice of using government resources to ghost-write letters and e-mails for private groups to send to its supporters.

Therefore, we advise that you not actually perform or take over the functions that ordinarily would be performed by a private group in writing an editorial or preparing a mass e-mail or letter. However, you are obviously authorized to send out information that explains, promotes, and advances the President's policies, programs, and decisions. A private group or individual who receives such information is, of course, free to use it as it sees fit -- including mass mailings to supporters, editorial writing, and lobbying. The principle we advise adhering to, however, is that the government should not actually take over the functions of the private individual or group.

Different issues are at stake when communications to and from the RNC are involved.

Just being conservative. I don't know that there is a copyright or other problem with using links to other websites. My guess is that there is not. My conservatism comes from not knowing whether any abuse, overuse, or other problem for a linked website could be created through a link the WH is providing. If the activity is other than political, are we favoring some organizations over others in identifying links? That is the extent of my thinking.

The only concerns that I see are preferential treatment and consent: both who is on the list of recipients of the Rove newsletter (will it be anyone who wants to be on it) and what organizations are listed as links could raise questions of favoritism if there are persons being excluded from the distribution system. Also, I would not use any links unless the person or entity linked had consented to the link.

Consider this your written record. I advised you this morning that your continued participation with the Young Republican organization would be appropriate to continue while you are employed by the White House. As I said, political activity is regulated by the Hatch Act, the limitations of which we discussed briefly. I noted that financial disclosure provisions expressly exclude reporting of political entity affiliations, suggesting special allowances for political activity under ethics law. Moreover, I believe limiting any political activity beyond the limitations imposed by the Hatch Act would raise First Amendment concerns.

Yes. Federal law only restricts reproduction of the Presidential Seal, not images of the White House. And White House policy restricts only non-White House use of images of the White House. Thus, there is no problem with the Strategic Initiatives group using a picture of the White House on its newsletter.

From the frying pan into the fire. I let the Office of Records Management guys here at White House (you met one of them today after our meeting) see a draft of my memo. They have some comments that they want to share with me tomorrow at some time after noon. So I had better hear them out before we finalize.

I don't know how many meetings you are looking at but if you are able to get a good chunk of these scheduled tomorrow that would be ideal - these are important and we want them have your times locked in.

As I understand it - if Al can't meet with them then Tim will - please coordinate with Heather on these meetings.

Plase be sure and get first and last name, social security numbers and dates of birth. If we are talking about quite a few I may enlist Ansley's assistances with the WAVES requests so please cc her on these emails.

Finally - Al doesn't "do lunch" so please don't schedule any of these meetings over meals.

Thanks guys and let me know if I need to do something to help.

I discussed the issue with my colleague Brett Kavanaugh. We think that it is not appropriate for the RNC to fund or finance official operations including supplying video tape copies of interviews with POTUS and VPOTUS. While political activities can be supported by the RNC, the operations of the Media Affairs office are official rather than political. A fundamental principle of appropriations law is that the Government pays its own way. While there are some exceptions to that general rule, here no exception applies. If the Media Affairs office wants and needs the tapes, it should pay for them itself.

Thank you for bringing the issue to my attention. These Government restrictions are arcane and counter intuitive sometimes, and I think just recognizing that there is an issue is sometimes the biggest hurdle to get over. If you have any further questions, let me know.

Subject: RNC video tapes

As we discussed earlier, we would like to receive video tape copies of interviews with VPOTUS and POTUS in local markets from the RNC. The process would involve me or a representative from the media affairs office calling the RNC to inform them of an interview. They in turn order a tape from Video Monitoring Service and give us a copy of the tape ordered. The tapes would be used to monitor how the POTUS's message is getting out to the various local markets.

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

I am pleased to report that the problem has been resolved, and that steps have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all users may now delete messages which do not need to be maintained in their in or out boxes. E-mails that should be preserved locally as a record of office activities may be printed out with correspondence information (i.e. date, time, sender, recipient and subject of the message), and filed in the appropriate place. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency.

FYI: CNN just showed pieces of President Bush's inauguration speech on civility, and then showed Justice Thomas' speech saying that civility was not a paramount value. CNN was trying to suggest (weakly) that not all conservatives agree with the civility offensive.

Thanks. As a follow up, I made a few changes to the second paragraph, and added a new sentence at the end.

In terms of our shop signing, do you mean that any appropriate OA or other EOP management official would be okay, or do you think that it should come from counsel?

On September 29, 2000, all current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

Judge Gonzales has signed off, but he and I both have concerns that this memo may cause concern to those who started on January 20 and have been deleting e-mails since they started. By negative implication, the memo may be read to say that such people should have been preserving their e-mails. Is there any way to clarify -- or to send this memo by e-mail only to those who fall into the relevant category?

Subject: Re: Draft Re: Resoution of E-mail Problem

Thanks. Phil Larsen has received the draft and will be coordinating it with Hector Irastorza, Deputy Assistant to the President for Management and Administration. As a matter of protocol, he wants to make sure that the Counsel to the President has seen and supports this draft first. It would be great if you can confirm that Judge Gonzales concurs so Phil can move this forward. It would also be helpful if you could relate any views Judge Gonzales has on who should sign, or confirm that your views on that represent those of the Counsel. Adam, 5-1268

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System (“ARMS”), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a “non-record”). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

I know your question was directed to Brett, but the message did not reach him, because it wasn't addressed to him. By copy of this e-mail, I am forwarding it to him for reply. I believe it's very easy for the AG to appoint a special prosecutor -- it's really just a matter of making an easy finding and a stroke of the pen. The only hard part, which often takes a little time, is figuring who precisely will be appointed. There are some regulatory standards governing appointment, and individuals need to be approached and convinced.

Here's how it happened:

Anne Womack received a question from the press about judicial selection procedures. She originally inquired of Clay Johnson. Clay recommended that she obtain our procedures document from Counsel's office. Anne then spoke to Ansley, who had me e-mail the document to her. (I recall sending the document to Ansley, but I don't recall what, if anything, I knew about the reason for Ansley's request.) Ansley then provided it to Anne.

Can we change the date in the new sentence to on or after January 20? Some people who came on board after September 30 may have heard of the order internally (even though they were unaffected), and would need to know. However, I think this is much less likely for folks who came on with the transition. Also, is "disregard" or "ignore" better?

I've taken a stab at some clarifying language with a new sentence in the second paragraph. As for sending it only to those in the relevant category, my sense is that while that may be possible, it would probably take time we don't have, with a greater chance that some people may be missed. It would be great if you and Judge Gonzalez can take a look and see if we're there.

Judge Gonzales has signed off, but he and I both have concerns that this memo may cause concern to those who started on January 20 and have been deleting e-mails since they started. Is there any way to clarify -- or to send this memo by e-mail only to those who fall into the relevant category?

Thanks. As a follow up, I made a few changes to the second paragraph, and added a new sentence at the end.

In terms of our shop signing, do you mean that any appropriate OA or other EOP management official would be okay, or do you think that it should come from counsel?

Brett--As a follow-up to my message this morning, here is a revised draft on the e-mail issue. I have also given this draft to Leanna Terrell, Associate Director for IS&T, to review to ensure technical accuracy. In case you did not receive my voice-mail, we have been given until COB today to produce a draft informing staff members of the resolution of the problem. Please call me ASAP to discuss. MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

You may disregard this memorandum if you began your employment in the Executive Office of the President on or after January 20, 2001.

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Staff members who began work at the EOP on or after January 20, 2001 as part of the change of administration were not affected by this problem, and were not covered by the September 29, 2000 order. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

I am pleased to report that the problem has been resolved, and that steps have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all users may now delete messages which do not need to be maintained in their in or out boxes. E-mails that should be preserved locally as a record of office activities may be printed out with correspondence information (i.e. date, time, sender, recipient and subject of the message), and filed in the appropriate place. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency.

Brett -

As you know, the WH and the Office of Public Liaison in particular are interested in defining their role with regard to an organization now becoming known as ABE - Americans for Better Education.

ABE is being created as an independent organization dedicated to facilitating the passage of The President's No Child Left Behind education agenda. ABE would be housed, funded, and staffed as a group totally independent from the WH. It would:

- Raise money
- Lobby Congress
- Conduct a media campaign
- Work at the corporate and grassroots level to pass this agenda

With this in mind, what is the legal, and ethical role that the WH and any staffers can play with regard to ABE.

Can we:

- Be present at ABE meetings (assuming they're off campus)?
- Discuss the formation, organization, and mission of ABE?
- Refer those interested in helping POTUS with his ed. plan to ABE and its offices/staff?
- Actively recruit for ABE from among contacts we have made here at the WH?

We're at the point in the formation of this organization where many here feel that we have to be very careful. The answers to these questions will go a long way in helping us move forward.

Many thanks for your help, Brett.

Hector Irastorza apparently wants the White House Staff Manual finalized by 5:00 today. I understand that comments from the Staff Secretary have yet to be received, so I don't know that the deadline is real. In any event, if you have any comments to the Staff Manual, please get them to Allison ASAP. She can compile the edits, and we can forward the changes to Dan Faro, who is putting the manual together.

Brett,

Thanks for the update.

Bill Leary, our Senior Director for Records Management, has rewritten our draft guidance to NSC staff to reflect the final guidance for WHouse staff as explained in your memo. We still need separate guidance because our classified email system requires our staff to make a decision not only as to classification (UNCLASS, CONFIDENTIAL, SECRET, TOP SECRET) but also whether it is a record or not. We will include a copy of your memo as an attachment to our memo.

Please note the last paragraph on preserving calendars we keep on our classified computer system, which are shared within directorates and in some cases within the NSC at large in the course of conducting official NSC business. This practice would seem to justify our preserving these as records, which has been our practice in the past.

I am bringing down a copy of our original memo with lineouts and a copy of our most recent proposal for your concurrence.

Thank you. Jock

I think it best not to have our direct extensions published and, instead, to just give the general number for the Counsel's Office.

Anyone who wishes to place an item on the WHJSC Agenda for this Wednesday's meeting needs to send me an e-mail with the contents of that item no later than noon on Monday. Old and new business are welcome.

Also, beginning this week, we will be trying to ensure that there is a tab and some reading materials, even if quite cursory, for each item on the agenda. Whoever puts an item on the agenda will be responsible for supplying the accompanying materials to me, Brett, and Brent. For old business, candidate memos that have previously been included in the binders may be repeated.

Thanks.

Brett,
With all the memos firing out of Counsel's office last week I'm not sure you could have had time to look at our draft records memo I dropped off.
When you do get a minute to read our latest draft could you please drop me an email and I'll then call to discuss?
Thank you. Jock

Brett,
Thanks for the update.
Bill Leary, our Senior Director for Records Management, has rewritten our draft guidance to NSC staff to reflect the final guidance for WHouse staff as explained in your memo. We still need separate guidance because our classified email system requires our staff to make a decision not only as to classification (UNCLASS, CONFIDENTIAL, SECRET, TOP SECRET) but also whether it is a record or not. We will include a copy of your memo as an attachment to our memo.
Please note the last paragraph on preserving calendars we keep on our classified computer system, which are shared within directorates and in some cases within the NSC at large in the course of conducting official NSC business. This practice would seem to justify our preserving these as records, which has been our practice in the past.
I am bringing down a copy of our original memo with lineouts and a copy of our most recent proposal for your concurrence.
Thank you. Jock

Ruth Marcus of the Washington Post called and left me a voice mail inviting me to the White House Correspondents Dinner. I have NOT talked to her (or any other reporter) since taking this job, but I had been assigned to deal with her quite a bit and got to know her in Whitewater/Lewinsky. In any event, can we go? (I left her a voicemail saying yes tentatively, but just as a placeholder.) I assume many in WH will go to this, but the question is whether we in the Counsel's office can and should go. (By the way, were I to go, I would pay reimbursement to Post because I would not want to take a gift, even though I assume this will qualify as an "interest of the agency" event.)

Feel free to say no; I obviously am under no illusions about her intent (battering me up), which is one of the reasons I would insist on paying.

I think that for an event like this, a formal, written invitation to the Justices should be sent to their offices at the Supreme Court. I also wonder if it would be more appropriate to invite all of the Justices.

Prescott:

Here is a stab at a revision of the "If you send us personal information" paragraph of your policy. Please let me know whether any of the revisions are factually inaccurate, especially my description of which government officials will be privy to resume information submitted via the website.

"If you choose to provide us with personal information -- by sending an e-mail to the President, Vice President, or someone else, or by filling out a form with your personal information and submitting it to us through our website -- we use that information to respond to your message and to help us get you the information you have requested. We do not collect personal information for any other purpose. Moreover, we do not create individual profiles with the information you provide or give this information to any private organizations. Nor does the White House collect information for commercial marketing. We will share your e-mail with another federal government agency only if your inquiry relates to that agency or if we are required to do so by law. The Presidential Records Act requires us to maintain documents received by the White House, including e-mails, and requires public disclosure of some of these documents twelve years after President Bush leaves office. In addition, we would release documents, including e-mails, if required to do so by a congressional or judicial subpoena. If you submit resume information through the [NAME of RESUME FORM], this information will be shared only with White House employees involved in making hiring decisions and, if you express interest in employment with a federal executive agency other than the White House, with officials responsible for making hiring decisions in that agency. We are required by the Presidential Records Act to maintain your resume as a record, but it is our position that your personal resume information will not be subject to public disclosure under the Act."

FYI.... Katja Bullock in PPO advises me that Mr. Kavanaugh of Counsels' office has already given his approval on the posting of the PPO form on whitehouse.gov. However, Ms. Bullock advises that he reviewed the privacy policy currently on the whitehouse.gov web site, which is not the most current text. (We have not yet posted the revised privacy policy you sent us on Feb. 26 since the system we were contemplating is not yet complete, and a new whitehouse.gov web site will be unveiled within the next several days.)

As soon as we hear back from you, PPO can have this form activated, which they have now stressed to me is a top-priority for PPO since the form on the Transition web site went off-line some time ago.

Thanks again.

Matt: The facsimiles to which you are referring would be governed solely by the Presidential Records Act, not by the Federal Records Act, or the

REV_00125407

Armstrongdecisions/orders which related to the records management of federal records. Accordingly, any records management issues regarding these faxes should be referred to White House Records Management (Terry Good), who then would coordinate any decision with White House Counsel. Sorry, I was not more helpful, but I can only advise you with regard to requirements for federal records. Kate

Subject: ARMS Requirements for Fax Server

Kate,

The Mail Analysis (MA) of the Presidential Correspondence Office uses two facsimiles to receive faxes addressed to the President. These two facsimiles run around the clock and generate lots of paper (and burn trees too). MA likes to install a Fax Server that will allow them to receive faxes electronically. All incoming faxes will be saved as images and can be printed on demand. The question is: does the Fax Server meet the ARMS requirements? If not, what should we do to make the Fax Server ARMS compliant?

Thanks,
Matthew Yin

Please find attached the latest "By the Numbers," which shows President Bush,s Gallup job approval today is higher than Presidents Clinton, Bush 41 and Reagan at comparable points in their administrations.

As always, I would appreciate it if you would pass this on to the appropriate members of your respective offices. Hard copies were distributed to Senior Staff. Thank you.

There has been some concern about how quickly we are moving to fill judicial vacancies. Please find quotes for me from democratic senators who cried out for action in the past because of "judicial emergencies." I want to use their statements to support our actions.

My experience (from the FCC) is that the cable networks purposefully select promotional items worth less than $20 because they are very familiar with the ethics rules. We'd still want to check on the value, but my guess is that these fall under (a).

What's the deal with the yellow binoculars from Animal Planet, and (Moose) should we send them back? Judging from their effectiveness, I would guess that the binoculars are either: a) worth less than $20; or b) an item of no intrinsic value.

Thanks for the information on USA resignation dates. However on Nevada, they are on the sheet for March 31st but I got a message referencing April 30th. Can you let me know which date is accurate? We need to call them very quickly this morning.

The FBI is now actively interviewing people for the B.I.s of the first group of names submitted to DOJ. Many of the standard questions they ask clearly indicate that the person in question is being considered for a judicial post. Prospective nominees are starting to receive calls from friends and colleagues congratulating them and asking for details about the judgeship etc. I have instructed the nominees I am shepherding to say only that they "are under consideration" for a judicial appointment but not to identify the court or provide any specifics concerning their status. I have also asked them to emphasize that premature publicity could be damaging to their chances and to ask their friends and colleagues to be discreet.

We all need to be aware that there is now much more information entering general circulation about the President's likely nominees.

I'm happy to do it any way you want. The Judge and I met with Senator McConnell today. He told us that there will be a vacancy on the 6th Circuit (the Kentucky) seat this summer. McConnell has candidates already lined up, and the Judge wants us to proceed ahead with these candidates promptly. Let me know if you would like me to handle that seat over the next couple of weeks.

I agree Helgi/Courtney should do CA10 Wyoming if they want.

I am more than happy to do it if you all do not want to.

What does that even mean? Why do they think Tommy Thompson is going to be making appointments? I gather that depending upon the Governor and Sensenbrenner's advice, we might even continue to employ the bipartisan commission that has functioned in that state for so long.

Also, given the news on the Wyoming vacancy, I think that Helgi and Courtney, who are handling the book for the week after next, should take on that next 10th Circuit vacancy. Any disagreement?

FYI re Wisconsin:
I've been informed by both Gov. McCollum's office and Rep. Sensenbrenner's office that the two senators from WI are threatening to blue-slip any judicial appointee with Tommy Thompson's "fingerprints" on it.

The stats I quoted for women in the federal judiciary and Clinton appointments were for circuit courts only. In the circuit court appointments, we will have 6 of 28, or 21%, which is a little less than the overall total (and thus a little less than the current totals in the circuit courts) but still quite good compared to where we were a few weeks ago.

AP: "The University of Michigan law school's admissions standards are unconstitutional because they use race as a factor in judging applicants, a federal judge ruled Tuesday. If you are involved in judicial selection (everyone but Moose, Bellinger and Addington I believe) - please be in the Judge's office at 3:00 pm tomorrow for a 45 minute meeting.

FYI - The Judge leaves the White House at 5:10 pm tomorrow and will be out all day Friday, Saturday and Sunday (family time in Austin). He returns late on Sunday night and will be back in the office on Monday morning.

Thanks!

The Judge and Rachel (who's handling Wisconsin) are meeting with Senator Kohl right now. That press account sure doesn't sound right to me. In my prior discussions with folks here, the hope was that we could use the existing system if it was fair and adequately protected the President's prerogatives. We have consulted with Sensenbrenner (and I believe with Governor McCallum as well) and have sought their input concerning whether the current arrangement is acceptable or whether perhaps some negotiations need to take place to work out some modifications, but as far as I know, little thought has been given to scrapping it entirely, and the notion of cutting out the Senators seems ludicrous to me, especially as both are on Judiciary. Maybe wires have gotten crossed somehow, or maybe Sensenbrenner is using this as a hardball pressure tactic in prelude to negotiations with Kohl and Feingold.

I got a heated phone call last night from Kohl's chief counsel on Judiciary. A Wisconsin reporter has a story that is on the verge of being published that says the AG has in essence "given the green light" to Sensenbrenner to abandon Wisconsin's two decade old bipartisan commission for selecting judges. (According to Kohl's staff, Sensenbrenner has the majority of appointments on the commission already, so they are prepared to give him a leading role but still insist that the established process should be followed.) Given that both Senators from Wisconsin are not only Democrats but on Judiciary, this has implications for our nominees coming up next week. No hold threat yet, but it was between the lines. And, it will definitely come up in the courtesy calls and in the questions next Thursday if we don't have an answer.

Is this something we can definitely debunk? (If not, that's another story.) thanks, sheryl

LEXIS-NEXIS Open Houses
during
National Library Week

The EEOB Library invites you to the unveiling of a customized LEXIS-NEXIS web interface, designed especially for EOP customers. This custom user interface will have simple forms-based templates for easy searching, user guides, search tips, links to both nexis.com and lexis.com and more. LEXIS-NEXIS representatives will be on hand to demonstrate the features of this page and to answer general questions regarding search formulation and data content. They will also demo short cuts and advanced search tips.

If you are a fairly new user, this is your chance to brush up on your search skills. If you are a &super searcher8, the LEXIS-NEXIS reps can give you tips to make your searches even faster and better. This is also a great opportunity to talk with reference librarians about library services to complement your LEXIS-NEXIS access.

Wednesday, April 4, 2001 3 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Friday, April 6, 2001 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

I think you should make clear to them two things:

1. They can clearly designate a favorite on their lists, and we will do everything possible to respect that designation; and
2. This is a matter of White House policy, and we cannot make nominations if the Senators will not comply.

Tom Young of Sen. Shelby's office has informed me that Sessions and Shelby will NOT send more than one name for each of the district court seats in Alabama -- he wouldn't be persuaded otherwise. I'll work on Sen. Sessions's staffer.

With Bart taking the lead on good quotes, let me add (I could do this all day long, but won't, with the literally dozens of Janice Brown quotes):

"The quixotic desire to do good, be universally fair and make everybody happy is understandable. Indeed, the majority's approach is more than a little endearing. There is only one problem with this approach. We are a court."
Janice Brown, dissent in an antitrust case in 1996.

LEXIS-NEXIS Open Houses
 during
 National Library Week

The EEOB Library invites you to the unveiling of a customized LEXIS-NEXIS web interface, designed especially for EOP customers. This custom user interface will have simple forms-based templates for easy searching, user guides, search tips, links to both nexis.com and lexis.com and more. LEXIS-NEXIS representatives will be on hand to demonstrate the features of this page and to answer general questions regarding search formulation and data content. They will also demo short cuts and advanced search tips.

If you are a fairly new user, this is your chance to brush up on your search skills. If you are a &super searcher8, the LEXIS-NEXIS reps can give you tips to make your searches even faster and better. This is also a great opportunity to talk with reference librarians about library services to complement your LEXIS-NEXIS access.

Wednesday, April 4, 2001 3 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Friday, April 6, 2001 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

LEXIS-NEXIS Open Houses
National Library Week

The EEOB Library invites you to the unveiling of a customized LEXIS-NEXIS web interface, designed especially for EOP customers. This custom user interface will have simple forms-based templates for easy searching, user guides, search tips, links to both nexis.com and lexis.com and more. LEXIS-NEXIS representatives will be on hand to demonstrate the features of this page and to answer general questions regarding search formulation and data content. They will also demo short cuts and advanced search tips.

If you are a fairly new user, this is your chance to brush up on your search skills. If you are a &super searcher8, the LEXIS-NEXIS reps can give you tips to make your searches even faster and better. This is also a great opportunity to talk with reference librarians about library services to complement your LEXIS-NEXIS access.

Wednesday, April 4, 2001 3 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Friday, April 6, 2001 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

Brett--Thanks. FYI, I had two follow up discussions, one with Captain Miller at WHMO, and the other with Leanna Terrell. I think both agreed that it would be a good idea to narrow down what kind of technical work the WHCA personnel could do on the laptops given their knowledge of the system and resources. Leanna has agreed to do that. In turn, this could be spelled out in any agreement so WHCA personnel would know what they are authorized to do.

Incidentally, Leanna mentioned that IS&T personnel may be along on overnight trips, so WHCA personnel may only have to do this for day trips. She will advise once this is resolved. Adam, 5-1268

Moose forwarded this to me.

Your home e-mail and computer are always subject to subpoena in the event of a congressional or grand jury investigation, regardless whether you use your home computer to access your office e-mail. Your personal e-mail account is not subject to the Presidential Records Act, however, regardless whether you use your home computer to access office e-mail.

The bottom line, therefore, is that nothing changes from a records perspective when you access your office e-mail from home.

Good morning! Many of you have secure ID cards which allow you to access your voice mail off-site. You can also access your email using this card. Some software has to be installed on your home computer however.

I don't know what impact this may have on the privacy of your home-based computer. We'll put in a request to Moose Cobb to check that out.

In the meantime, if you'd like this access, please let me know. I'll put in a request to have the software made available. NOTE TO BOB: I'll put in a request for you :)

On the meeting, I am available anytime this week except on Wednesday from roughly 3:30 - 5:00 p.m. and on Friday from 12:30 - 2:30 p.m. I think Brett should join us -- since he is the office expert on designating things political versus official.

On the billing issue, the Judge has recommended a policy that would allow you pay the bills directly from the travel funds, unless the employee received a full per diem on the day of the travel. If the employee received a per diem to cover meals, he or she must pay for the meals eaten on Air Force One. So for past bills, where per diems were already given, staff member need to pay. But going forward, the recommended policy would allow you to institute a procedure whereby staff members receive a reduced per diem and then are not required to pay for meals on AFO.

Last I recall, we were trying to get a meeting together on this subject and some related matters. Can we try again for this week? I think the attendees were you, me, Jim Daniel with FMD and possibly Brett.

Also - think we have touched on this issue - I have the Airlift Ops bills for food on Air Force One. Are we still determining whether the staff bill can be paid for by Travel funds, or do the individuals have to reimburse directly. FMDs recommendation is that it may be paid from Travel Funds. Any thoughts?

OFFICE OF STRATEGIC INITIATIVES

"The ability to learn faster than your competitors may be your only sustainable competitive advantage."* Arie de Geus, former strategic planner for Royal Dutch Shell

April 3, 2001

Dear Friends,

You are invited to join me in attending the first of OSI,s new lecture series. These will be held periodically to help us to look over the horizon and anticipate change, keeping in touch with the latest insights, trends, and ideas. One way to accomplish this is talking with thinkers, writers, and scholars about what we can do to better plan for the future.

This week, a panel of presidential scholars will meet with commissioned officers yodiscuss lessons that can be learned from previous Presidents* What happens after the first 100 days? How can an administration keep the momentum going? What obstacles have presidents typically faced in their first year? It will be well worth your time. Here are the details:

WHAT: OSI presidential scholars panel

WHO: Jack Watson, former Chief of Staff to President Jimmy Carter
Stephen Skowronek, author of &The Politics Presidents Make8
Fred Greenstein, author &The Presidential Difference8
Norm Ornstein, American Enterprise Institute

WHEN: Friday, April 6, 2:45pm

WHERE: Room 472 in the EEOB

Despite its name, this is not really a lecture series. Instead, it,s more of a give-and-take information session. The format of the event will be simple, with plenty of time for questions.

And if there are any non-commissioned staff that you think might benefit from the presentation, please contact OSI at 62108 and they will make accommodations based on a first come, space-available basis.

Due to limited seating, please don,t hesitate to immediately RSVP. I hope you will join me this Friday. You won,t want to miss it.

Sincerely,

Andy Card

I spoke to a Superior Court judge I know and asked him to take an informal poll of some of his fellow judges and none of them (including Carter, Reagan, Bush I, and Clinton appointees) received a call from the President at the time of nomination. One was called by the Counsel to the President; the rest were called by Counsel's office staff. Naturally, all of the judges polled said that they would have been thrilled to receive a call from the President.

OFFICE OF STRATEGIC INITIATIVES

"The ability to learn faster than your competitors may be your only sustainable competitive advantage."* Arie de Geus, former strategic planner for Royal Dutch Shell

April 3, 2001

Dear Friends,

You are invited to join me in attending the first of OSI,s new lecture series. These will be held periodically to help us to look over the horizon and anticipate change, keeping in touch with the latest insights, trends, and ideas. One way to accomplish this is talking with thinkers, writers, and scholars about what we can do to better plan for the future.

This week, a panel of presidential scholars will meet with commissioned officers yodiscuss lessons that can be learned from previous Presidents* What happens after the first 100 days? How can an administration keep the momentum going? What obstacles have presidents typically faced in their first year? It will be well worth your time. Here are the details:

WHAT: OSI presidential scholars panel

WHO: Jack Watson, former Chief of Staff to President Jimmy Carter
Stephen Skowronek, author of &The Politics Presidents Make&
Norm Ornstein, American Enterprise Institute

WHEN: Friday, April 6, 2:45pm

WHERE: Room 472 in the EEOB

Despite its name, this is not really a lecture series. Instead, it,s more of a give-and-take information session. The format of the event will be simple, with plenty of time for questions.

And if there are any non-commissioned staff that you think might benefit from the presentation, please contact OSI at 62108 and they will make accommodations based on a first come, space-available basis.

Due to limited seating, please don,t hesitate to immediately RSVP. I hope you will join me this Friday. You won,t want to miss it.

Sincerely,

Andy Card

OFFICE OF STRATEGIC INITIATIVES

"The ability to learn faster than your competitors may be your only sustainable competitive advantage."* Arie de Geus, former strategic planner for Royal Dutch Shell

April 3, 2001

Dear Friends,

You are invited to join me in attending the first of OSI,s new lecture series. These will be held periodically to help us to look over the horizon and anticipate change, keeping in touch with the latest insights, trends, and ideas. One way to accomplish this is talking with thinkers, writers, and scholars about what we can do to better plan for the future.

This week, a panel of presidential scholars will meet with commissioned officers yodiscuss lessons that can be learned from previous Presidents* What happens after the first 100 days? How can an administration keep the momentum going? What obstacles have presidents typically faced in their first year? It will be well worth your time. Here are the details:

WHAT: OSI presidential scholars panel

WHO: Jack Watson, former Chief of Staff to President Jimmy Carter
Stephen Skowronek, author of &The Politics Presidents Make8
Norm Ornstein, American Enterprise Institute

WHEN: Friday, April 6, 2:45pm

WHERE: Room 472 in the EEOB

Despite its name, this is not really a lecture series. Instead, it,s more of a give-and-take information session. The format of the event will be simple, with plenty of time for questions.

And if there are any non-commissioned staff that you think might benefit from the presentation, please contact OSI at 62108 and they will make accommodations based on a first come, space-available basis.

Due to limited seating, please don,t hesitate to immediately RSVP. I hope you will join me this Friday. You won,t want to miss it.

Sincerely,

Andy Card

I would remind everyone that Sen. Hatch's letter may summarize the Senate's understanding/interpretation of the "advice" part of "advice and consent." I think the President's understanding/interpretation of "advice" -- as an institutional matter -- should be something less than Sen. Hatch's suggested guidelines. Indeed, Sen. Hatch set forth these guidelines when (1) the opposition party (Senate GOP) was strong (with 55 Senators) and (2) the President (Clinton) was weak. Here, the opposition party is relatively weak (only 50 Senators and no chairmanships) and (2) Pres. Bush is relatively strong (there is a presumption in favor of a President's nominees at the outset of an administration). Ultimately it will all descend to a battle that will be decided on the basis of who (the President or the Senate) is willing to exercise the political power they have to influence the selection of nominees. But, as an initial matter, it seems to me we should not feel compelled to comply with the Hatch guidelines in every respect. Perhaps further discussion would be fruitful?

Subject: Definition of "good faith consultation with home state senators"

In speaking with Sharon Prost earlier today in preparation for our meeting tomorrow, I learned that Senator Hatch's staff has located a 1997 letter in which he provided formal guidance on what he considers "good faith pre-nomination consultation with home-state senators" to include. You will recall that Senate Judiciary Committee policy is that failure to engage in such consultation means that a negative blue slip is accorded dispositive weight.

According to Senator Hatch, good faith consultation means:

1. Giving serious consideration to anyone proposed by a home-state senator as a possible nominee;
2. Giving home-state senators the names of candidates the administration is seriously considering for nomination at least two weeks prior to initiating any formal background checks and giving serious consideration to any feedback provided by the senators;
3. Advising the home-state senators when background checks are initiated on a candidate over a senator's objection; and
4. Notifying the home-state senators that the President will nominate the individual prior to publicly announcing it.

It is obviously discouraging that we did not learn of this letter sooner, but we now need to do everything possible to comply with these guidelines so that we do not give the Democrats more of a process issue than they already think they have.

Subject: Call from Senator Allen's office

I just received a voicemail from Senator Allen's Chief of Staff, Paul Unger, who has my name and number because I contacted him a few weeks ago regarding the district court vacancy in Virginia. He said that their press people had received inquiries re the possible nomination of Keisler to CA4 and that he wanted to know "whether there is any movement on Gregory."

I think someone from the "CA4 team" (Brett? Brad?) should either handle the return call or advise me on the strategy for response.

I spoke to him a second ago. He wondered if the book had been distributed to the Committee, and I told him that I believed that it had -- although if he didn't tell Brent to distribute it, I didn't know who did. Brent, who gave you the okay?

Good day! I spoke to Phil Mistretta, one of our latest volunteers, about his private sector work. Phil said he is an independent contractor who works with larger consultancies. He currently does not have any active consulting projects, although some of the larger consultancies for whom he works do have bids pending on projects where he could have a role.

In the past, he has worked on projects that have involved government agencies but it is not always the case. For example, his last project which he finished at the end of February involved analysis, report writing, and briefing on the financial systems in several Asian countries. It was part of a USAID project to stimulate growth in those countries.

He said that the subject matter of projects with which he is generally affiliated is different from anything he would be working on as a volunteer. If anything arose however, he would recuse himself from working on it here.

Could you please advise as to what our next steps should be.

Best regards,
Janet Walker

I think that there are some issues associated with this volunteer's involvement in sensitive matters; I would like to discuss the issue with you. Consider whether there is a possibility of the individual's gaining access to non-public information that he would be able to use to his advantage in his private capacity. Would there be a conflict between his Government role and his private business? Would he be representing private clients with respect to his Government activities? Would he be trading on his public office?

We would like to use a volunteer from the White House Volunteer's Office but we noticed on the days that he is not volunteering at the White House he is a private consultant. His focus seems to be international financial markets. We would like for the volunteer to attend our staff meeting

The LEXIS-NEXIS open houses in the EEOB Library are great opportunities to see the new customized web page, get search tips, and give your feedback on search software and publications you'd like to see added. Please plan to drop by one of the sessions this week!

LEXIS-NEXIS Open Houses
during
National Library Week

REV_00125775

The EEOB Library invites you to the unveiling of a customized LEXIS-NEXIS web interface, designed especially for EOP customers. This custom user interface will have simple forms-based templates for easy searching, user guides, search tips, links to both nexis.com and lexis.com and more. LEXIS-NEXIS representatives will be on hand to demonstrate the features of this page and to answer general questions regarding search formulation and data content. They will also demo short cuts and advanced search tips.

If you are a fairly new user, this is your chance to brush up on your search skills. If you are a &super searcher8, the LEXIS-NEXIS reps can give you tips to make your searches even faster and better. This is also a great opportunity to talk with reference librarians about library services to complement your LEXIS-NEXIS access.

Wednesday, April 4, 2001 3 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Friday, April 6, 2001 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

EEOB Library
Room 308
Eisenhower Executive Office Building

The LEXIS-NEXIS open houses in the EEOB Library are great opportunities to see the new customized web page, get search tips, and give your feedback on search software and publications you'd like to see added. Please plan to drop by one of the sessions this week!

LEXIS-NEXIS Open Houses
 during
 National Library Week

REV_00125781

The EEOB Library invites you to the unveiling of a customized LEXIS-NEXIS web interface, designed especially for EOP customers. This custom user interface will have simple forms-based templates for easy searching, user guides, search tips, links to both nexis.com and lexis.com and more. LEXIS-NEXIS representatives will be on hand to demonstrate the features of this page and to answer general questions regarding search formulation and data content. They will also demo short cuts and advanced search tips.

If you are a fairly new user, this is your chance to brush up on your search skills. If you are a &super searcher8, the LEXIS-NEXIS reps can give you tips to make your searches even faster and better. This is also a great opportunity to talk with reference librarians about library services to complement your LEXIS-NEXIS access.

Wednesday, April 4, 2001 3 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Friday, April 6, 2001 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.

EEOB Library
Room 308

Subject: Re: Volunteer

Good day! I spoke to Phil Mistretta, one of our latest volunteers, about his private sector work. Phil said he is an independent contractor who works with larger consultancies. He currently does not have any active consulting projects, although some of the larger consultancies for whom he works do have bids pending on projects where he could have a role.

In the past, he has worked on projects that have involved government agencies but it is not always the case. For example, his last project which he finished at the end of February involved analysis, report writing, and briefing on the financial systems in several Asian countries. It was part of a USAID project to stimulate growth in those countries.

He said that the subject matter of projects with which he is generally affiliated is different from anything he would be working on as a volunteer. If anything arose however, he would recuse himself from working on it here.

Could you please advise as to what our next steps should be.

Best regards,
Janet Walker

I think that there are some issues associated with this volunteer's involvement in sensitive matters; I would like to discuss the issue with you. Consider whether there is a possibility of the individual's gaining access to non-public information that he would be able to use to his advantage in his private capacity. Would there be a conflict between his Government role and his private business? Would he be representing private clients with respect to his Government activities? Would he be trading on his public office?

Moose/Brett--I'm reviewing some new information our security folks will be posting on the intranet on Computer security. They have a bullet on personal use of the internet. I'd like to suggest that they arrange a link to Judge Gonzales February 21 memo on this (the policy on unofficial use of government office equipment), which they could probably scan in. Any objection? Adam

Statement of the Internal Revenue Service on Federal Income Tax Issues of Presidential Libraries
Submitted to
The Subcommittee on Government Efficiency, Financial Management and Intergovernmental Relations
Of the Committee on Government Reform
United States House of Representatives
April 5, 2001

Introduction

This statement discusses issues of tax-exempt status, private foundation classification, and disclosure of contributors raised by organizations that support presidential archival depositories. Generally, these presidential library foundations raise funds to construct and endow a library to hold the papers of a former President and make them available to researchers and the general public. On completion, the presidential library foundation conveys the facility and its endowment to the federal government. The presidential library foundation, however, may continue to raise funds to construct and maintain facilities and conduct educational programs related to the library.

Exemption Under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code

In general, presidential library foundations would qualify for recognition of exemption under § 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code as educational organizations. They also may qualify as “charitable” within the meaning of § 501(c)(3) because they lessen the burdens of government.

An organization is educational if it engages in (1) instruction or training of the individual for the purpose of improving or developing his capabilities, or (2) instruction of the public on subjects useful to the individual and beneficial to the community. Treasury Regulation §1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(3)(i). The second category covers a broad range of institutions, including libraries. Several precedents under § 501(c)(3) of the Code (or its predecessor) have held that an organization operating a library qualified for exemption. In United States v. Proprietors of Social Law Library, 102 F.2d 481 (1st Cir. 1939), the court held a law library limited to dues-paying members exempt under section 101(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1939. In Revenue Ruling (Rev. Rul.) 75-196, 1975-1 C.B. 155, the Internal Revenue Service ruled that a law library whose rules limited access and use to members, or their designees, of a local bar association qualified for exemption. In Forest Press, Inc. v. Commissioner, 22 T.C. 265 (1954), the Tax Court held an organization engaged in developing and publishing the Dewey Decimal System exempt as an educational organization. Rev. Rul. 81-29, 1981-1 C.B. 329, recognized as exempt an organization that operated a computer network to facilitate the exchange of bibliographic information among member libraries, some of which were not tax-exempt.

Presidential library foundations can also qualify as charitable organizations under § 501(c)(3) of the Code because they lessen the burdens of government. Section 501(c)(3) uses the term "charitable" in its generally accepted legal sense, which includes lessening the burdens of government. Treasury Regulation §1.501(c)(3)-1(d)(2). Rev. Rul. 85-2, 1985-1 C.B. 178, describes a two-step analysis to determine if an organization is lessening the burdens of government. First, there must be an objective manifestation by the government that it considers the activity part of its burden. Second, the organization must show that its activities actually lessen the government's burden. Presidential library foundations satisfy both parts of the test. The Presidential Libraries Acts of 1955 and 1968 manifest that the federal Government considers maintenance of these archives to be its burden (see, especially, 44 U.S.C. 2112). The activities of presidential library foundations alleviate this burden.

Foundation Classification

A presidential library foundation exempt under § 501(c)(3) that receives contributions from a broad number of sources should also qualify as "other than a private foundation" based on the source and amount of its financial support. Private foundations, which are supported by contributions from a limited number of individuals, such as a single family, and by investment income rather than public support or income from activities that further exempt purposes, are subject to different disclosure rules and strict rules enforced by excise taxes. (The word "Foundation" in an organization's name does not indicate that the organization is a "private foundation" for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code.) Normally, a presidential library foundation, like most § 501(c)(3) organizations that expect to receive public support, applies for an advance determination under §§ 509(a)(1) and 170(b)(1)(A)(vi) that it would not be a private foundation. As with most applicants for exemption under § 501(c)(3), the advance determination would be based on projections that it would receive substantial support in the form of contributions from publicly supported organizations, from a governmental unit, or from the general public. To receive a final determination under §§ 509(a)(1) and 170(b)(1)(A)(vi), at the end of a five-year period the organization must submit a financial support schedule demonstrating that during that period it received sufficient public support from gifts, grants, and contributions.

Publicity of Contributor Information Filed by Exempt Organizations

Section 6104 of the Code, in an exception to the general rule that returns and return information are confidential, specifically authorizes public disclosure of information on any exempt organization's application for recognition of exemption and annual information returns. However, § 6104(b) specifically provides that

"[N]othing in this subsection shall authorize the [Internal Revenue Service] to disclose the name or address of any contributor to any organization or trust (other than a private foundation, as defined in section 509(a)) or a political organization exempt from taxation under section 527 which is required to furnish such information." Because presidential library foundations normally qualify as "other than a private foundation," the names and addresses of contributors may not be disclosed by the Internal Revenue Service.

Section 6104(d) of the Code requires exempt organizations to make available their annual information returns and application materials for public inspection. However, § 6104(d)(3) provides that organizations that are not private foundations need not disclose the names and addresses of any of their contributors.

I spoke to the woman in the First Lady's Press Office, Noelia Rodriguez, who responded to the Post's inquiry. She, on her own initiative, decided not to mention the commercialization rationale for not selling eggs because she did not want to "pit this Administration against past Administrations" and therefore decided to emphasize that this was just a return to tradition. While I am not sure I agree with her decision, she's the press expert, and I'm certainly not. So I leave it to her judgment.

There will likely be additional press stories on this. Noelia spoke to the Press Office about the story -- although I don't know if she did so before or after speaking to the Post reporter.

This Court is included in the DOJ vacancy list, along with all other Article III courts, plus the Claims Court. There is currently one vacancy on that Court (as of last week), and we will begin work to fill it. Frankly, the candidate recommended by the Georgia Senators, the Georgia Republican Congressmen, and Senator Helms looks outstanding -- at least on paper.

The only courts for which we are responsible that are not included in the DOJ list are the Court of Military Appeals, the Court of Veterans Appeals, and the Tax Court. Typically, the Treasury Department General Counsel assists the White House with the latter court, while the DOD GC assists with the former two. I am uncertain at present how many, if any, vacancies exist on these courts. By copy of this e-mail, I will ask Brent to investigate.

Leanna: Given that these would constitute presidential records, I need to defer to White House Counsel's Office and White House Records Management Office to make the call on the format in which the records will be captured and preserved (paper or electronic).

A word of caution, however. OA has already received FOIA requests related to OA information posted on the EOP Intranet. The more we co-mingle presidential and federal records on the Intranet, the more and more likely it becomes that OA FOIA searches will locate responsive documents that originated with WHO. This is a potential issue because those entities in the EOP whose sole function is to advise and assist the President, such as WHO, are not subject to the FOIA. Although OA would argue that such documents were not OA "agency records" for FOIA purposes because WHO created the document and maintains custody and control over its own records, we may want to explore whether it would be technically possible to "partition" the Intranet site into EOP presidential (WHO, OVP, OPD, CEA, NSC, PFIAB) and EOP federal (OA, OMB, CEQ, OSTP, ONDCP, USTR) at least at the highest level (opening page). This may or may not be a big issue, but if we can factor these considerations into the design of the NT Intranet through the use of links vs. direct postings, etc., perhaps we can lessen the number of FOIA referrals and consultations. Let me know if you wish to discuss further. Kate

Michael,

From what you describe, this should be no more than a couple of business days worth of work. A side note, however, the backend created for this system for UNIX will not port well to an NT system. When the intranet goes to NT, we will have to revisit the application and construct a new backend. We may be able to find a solution which ports well to NT, but that will lengthen the development period significantly due to the research/testing required.

Monty:

I'm looking to create a space on the EOP Intranet server where the White House Office of Communications could post Word and Excel documents for viewing by all EOP users. Six users in the Office would have permission to upload documents.

The type of system envisioned is one where the user could simply create a document on their pc, then browse their directory, and attach the file to an ftp process for uploading to www.eop.gov/DirectoryName/

In addition, there needs to be a capability to dynamically add a link to the document to an index page in the directory.

Can you provide we with an estimate of the time and effort required to develop such a system? Please contact me right away if further elucidation of these requirements is needed. I would like to have information to present at this Thursday's White House Internet Advisory Team Meeting.

Thanks

Michael

The more we co-mingle presidential and federal records on the Intranet, the more and more likely it becomes that OA FOIA searches will locate responsive documents that originated with WHO. This is a potential issue because those entities in the EOP whose sole function is to advise and assist the President, such as WHO, are not subject to the FOIA. Although OA would argue that such documents were not OA "agency records" for FOIA purposes because WHO created the document and maintains custody and control over its own records, we may want to explore whether it would be technically possible to "partition" the Intranet site into EOP presidential (WHO, OVP, OPD, CEA, NSC, PFIAB) and EOP federal (OA, OMB, CEQ, OSTP, ONDCP, USTR) at least at the highest level (opening page). This may or may not be a big issue, but if we can factor these considerations into the design of the NT Intranet through the use of links vs. direct postings, etc., perhaps we can lessen the number of FOIA referrals and consultations. Let me know if you wish to discuss further. Kate

You may have seen or heard about this already, but is this going to be an issue with RM?

Michael,

From what you describe, this should be no more than a couple of business days worth of work. A side note, however, the backend created for this system for UNIX will not port well to an NT system. When the intranet goes to NT, we will have to revisit the application and construct a new backend. We may be able to find a solution which ports well to NT, but that will lengthen the development period significantly due to the research/testing required.

Subject: Intranet site for WH Communications

Monty:

I'm looking to create a space on the EOP Intranet server where the White House Office of Communications could post Word and Excel documents for viewing by all EOP users. Six users in the Office would have permission to upload documents.

The type of system envisioned is one where the user could simply create a document on their pc, then browse their directory, and attach the file to an ftp process for uploading to www.eop.gov/DirectoryName/

In addition, there needs to be a capability to dynamically add a link to the document to an index page in the directory.

Can you provide we with an estimate of the time and effort required to develop such a system? Please contact me right away if further elucidation of these requirements is needed. I would like to have information to present at this Thursday's White House Internet Advisory Team Meeting.

Thanks

Michael

Think long term, Rachel -- when she passes unconstitutional legislation, he can strike it down, and he'll be on a court exercising that authority long after she is in the political graveyard . . .

On second thought, maybe he shouldn't be appointed. I can think of few political things better than getting rid of Barbara Boxer.

Subject: Interesting snippet on Cox/Boxer

From UPI:

You be the judge -- Political circles on both coasts are buzzing over the possibility of California GOP Congressman Chris Cox being named to a seat on the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Cox says it would be "an honor" to be considered for the post, but the matter is out of his hands. His U.S. congressional office had no comment on the matter. California Democrat Senator Barbara Boxer, who is making cluck-cluck noises over the possibility the Harvard-trained lawyer might join the court, is secretly said to be relieved at the possibility. The reason -- Cox is a sure bet to take her on in 2004 and the well-liked, well-funded former associate White House counsel could send her packing back to San Francisco.

Ken,

Ben Ginsburg contacted me to discuss the manner in which the three major Republican campaign committees may use the President and/or the White House in connection with fundraising letters. He suggested that an appropriate first step would be for Judge Gonzales to meet with the executive directors of the committees and their attorneys, so that they could explain to us the various ways they wish to reference the President and White House in such letters. This would then help us formulate an overall policy. If you agree that this is a good idea, would you advise us on how we should go about setting up this meeting? Thanks.

Noel Francisco

I see no problem with re-using the tape. As to the costs of the tape, one approach is simply to inform them that we may want to re-use the tape and ask them whether they have any problem with that. A second approach is for the government to reimburse them for the cost of the tape and then there would be no problem re-using it.

Good morning! The North Carolina Bankers Association would like the President to tape remarks for their upcoming annual conference. Since it is a state group, the preliminary decision was to try and see if we could draft generic remarks for the President and then utilize the same tape for other banking associations for the next couple of months. This brings up two questions:

1. The North Carolina Bankers are willing to cover the cost of taping (if approved, the taping will be done in conjunction with other tapings to keep cost down). Is the re-use of the tape something we can do?
2. If it is acceptable to re-use the tape, how would we allocate costs to the North Carolina Bankers?

Your guidance would be greatly appreciated. We're on a tight turnaround so anything you can do asap would be great.

Janet

Ask a Landon grad and you'll get some help. You may participate in the proposed charitable activity. See page D-14 in the staff manual for some general guidance. Most significantly, do not personally solicit funds from subordinates or from persons who do business with the White House; solicitation in the form of mass mailings are okay. Otherwise, you have already laid out the parameters for your participation in your e-mail to the Prep boy next door; stick by them and you'll be in good shape. Good luck.

Sounds like an excellent cause. This is a Moose Cobb question, I believe, so I am referring it to him by this e-mail.

By the way, I am G'town Prep '83.

Brett:
Thanks for handling our earlier question.
This one involves my own time with a charity event. When you have a moment, let me know your advice -

One of my best friends from high school. Mark Ferris, passed away from a diabetes-related heart attack last year. Several other classmates and I established a scholarship fund in his honor at our school, Landon.

To give the fund a boost, we have been talking through plans to hold a 10K run in Mark's honor next year at the school. Proceeds from the run would benefit Mark's fund, as well as the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation (JDF), who has become a willing partner in planning and executing the event. The dynamics of my relationship with Mark, my classmates, and the school, have led to me being asked to Chair the event, as well as the scholarship fund.

I know there are sometimes constraints on charitable activity when working in the White House. So you know:

- I would be working on this event in my free, non-work, time.
- My role in the event would be as a private citizen, not a White House Employee.
- I would not use any government equipment to undertake my duties as chair of the event or fund
- My official job at the WH does not involve any type of contact with the Juvenile Diabetes Fund or the Landon School.

Coddy

Not at all. This story is basically consistent with the ones that speculated about possible Bush administration nominees both before and after the election (which I just reread because almost every one mentions Garza). These names have all appeared before, and the sources are loosely described as "GOP insiders." That could be, and probably is, people totally outside the administration.

identified six likely nominees

"Among the potential nominees, GOP insiders say, are two men who have the chance to become the first Hispanic justice: Alberto Gonzales, now White House counsel, and Emilio Garza, a U.S. appeals court judge in San Antonio.

Other possible choices include J. Harvie Wilkinson and J. Michael Luttig, both veteran judges on a U.S. appeals court in Richmond, Va.; Samuel Alito, a federal appeals judge in Philadelphia; and Janice Brown, a California Supreme Court justice, who was among the first African-Americans on that bench.

We have just concluded a deal with the California Senators on a brand new, bipartisan system of merit selection panels for picking district judges throughout the state of California. Senator Feinstein is willing to keep her powder dry and to coordinate with us on the public announcement of this arrangement if we want to take some ownership of this -- but probably not indefinitely. We need to decide quickly whether and how to announce this publicly. Senator Feinstein's one request is that Nina Totenberg of NPR be included among the first journalists who gets the story.

Brett and I are available to meet with you to discuss your office's activities -- let us know when is good for you.

Give me or Brett a call about the 100-days phone calls. The short answer is that it would be the wiser course to have the government pay for these calls.

In addition to the three items I previously laid out as part of our talking points project, we need one more item following up on Karl's suggestion yesterday: For each candidate we should have a separate sheet with the names, telephone numbers, and short descriptors for three prominent local people who would be willing to field media calls and say great things about our candidates on the day of nomination. When you talk to your candidates to find out where they would like to receive the call from the President, be sure to ask them to call you back with this information as well. Thanks.

If anyone is responsible for names that are ready to go the President other than those circulated yesterday by Rachel (plus Mills from Mississippi), please send them immediately to Jason, Brent, and Libby. Libby will generate the attendance list for the meeting, and Jason will be in charge of pulling the books together.

If we decide to do this and you work on your scheduling request, the earlier in the afternoon the better for news purposes.

Subject: Possible May 10 Rose Garden address and announcement of judicial nominees

I checked with scheduling. The President is in town May 10 and has large blocks of staff time in the afternoon. Thus, it looks like his schedule would accommodate an event announcing his first slate of federal judicial nominations if the conclusion were reached that such an event would be advantageous.

We are not planning to do a scheduling request unless and until the political/communications folks decide to pull the trigger on this. If we do end up doing one, we'll make sure scheduling knows the earlier the better.

I'd certainly like to have someone call them up and correct the record, but unless the Judge or Tim picks up the phone or directs Press to do it, it won't happen.

Subject: Correction?

Is it worth correcting the NYT editorial writers, who say that the WHSJC is comprised "largely" of Thomas clerks, Scalia clerks, and Starr
"alumni?" This is a real exaggeration that allows the media to give the Committee a much "scarier" cast than it really has: there is 1 Thomas clerk, 1 Scalia clerk, and 1 ex-Starr lawyers. That's 3 people out of a committee that has from 15-20 members, and it's less than a third of even our office. Maybe this is not worth the candle but this is simply inaccurate and it bothers me.

Item of interest -- the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit recently held that the unsealing, on the motion of the Government, of warrant affidavits did not constitute a waiver of the Government's informant privilege when the Government subsequently moved to reseal the affidavits over the objection of the defendant (AUSA on case went on vacation, fill-in AUSA moved to unseal, AUSA returned from vacation and promptly moved to reseal). Has a decision been made on this yet? The more I think about it, the more I'm convinced it's an excellent idea that could have an important effect in helping our nominees get through. We have a compelling story to tell about these nominees, and the President can tell it better than anyone else. It would be a signal that the Administration is firmly behind these nominees -- a critical signal given that today's New York Times report that the Democratic conference is gearing up to obstruct the President's judicial nomination in a fashion that is truly unprecedented in its partisanship and frankly ideological basis.

we discussed this morning in senior staff and agreed to do an event, although probably not in the Rose garden. Andy and Karl had valid concerns of being too political. I think Karen addressed those concerns, but we will need to be careful in crafting the event. Can you and Jim work on a joint scheduling request for an event next wednesday. once approved, jim will convene a event working group to ensure the necessary divisions are included in the planning process.

From a recent announcement by Lexis-Nexis:

NEXIS.COM ENHANCED

Quick Search is the new name for the tool formerly known as Search on the nexis.com(SM) home page. And Quick Search has even more content! It now features the ability to search 60 days of news as well as two years of company, Web, and legislative data.

We removed the radio buttons for all words, any words, or exact phrase from the Quick Search form. However, you can still search phrases by using quotation marks around the search terms. For example, enter "workplace morale" into the query form to search for the phrase workplace morale. The search engine that powers the nexis.com service interprets words within quotes as a phrase.

Another new feature is that nexis.com evaluates the search against all documents in the databases being searched and retrieves the most relevant documents. Previously, only the 1,000 most recent documents were ranked by relevance. This new feature delivers more on-target search results, saving you even more time!

I got Brett's ok on it. Do you think that the Judge still needs to look at it? David Addington's request was to "obtain Card, Rove, and Gonzales clearance of this item for a dinner that is the President's dinner."
thanks!

MTLA members - FYI - Following are two articles on the current administration that are applicable to trial lawyers.

FROM THE GUARDIAN IN LONDON

Cabal of lawyers drives Bush further to right

Ed Vulliamy

Sunday April 29, 2001

The Observer

George W. Bush's administration - 100 days old today - is being hailed as his country's most ideologically right-wing of the past 100 years, across a spectrum of policies ranging from the environment to labour, civil rights to social issues.

But the rip tide that cuts beneath all Bush's plans to transform the landscape, with more durable results than any other policy, is the hijacking - behind closed doors - of the US judiciary.

The administration - to which power was in effect granted by the Supreme Court in a controversial ruling last December - is preparing not only to set the highest court in the land on course for a conservative generation, but has quietly revolutionised the way in which all federal judges are appointed to benches across the country, guaranteeing politically right-wing selections.

At the core of this manoeuvre, which will weave a new fabric in US society, is a tightly organised right-wing lawyers' group which has come in from the fringes to the core of the administration.

It is called the Federalist Society, of which Bush's Solicitor General Theodore Olson, Interior Secretary Gale Norton, Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham and Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Orrin Hatch are leading members - as are many members of the new White House counsel team.

Stalwart conservative judges on the Supreme Court Anthony Scalia and Clarence Thomas are patrons and guests of the group, and Attorney General John Ashcroft is a close affiliate.

The emergence of the Federalists is traced in a study by the New York-based Institute for Democracy Studies, which concludes that 'extreme conservative organisations sponsoring a combination of right-wing litigation and advocacy are opening the way for a radical transformation of the American legal system'.

Ralph Neas, President of the Washington think-tank People for the American Way, says that 'the White House counsel's office and the Department of Justice are being turned over to the Federalist Society, a bastion of far-right legal thought'.

The Federalist Society's philosophy underpins, and is ready to steer, all the administration's cornerstone policies on deregulation of environmental and labour law, education, civil rights and abortion. The author of the IDS study, Julie Gerchik, says that 'the agenda is to dismantle everything built since the New Deal'. There was even a Federalist panel in Chicago on 28 March entitled 'Rolling Back the New Deal'.

'Where is the divide between politics and the law here?' says Gerchik. 'This is politics enforced by legal mechanisms.'

The society has already had an impact on major decisions: when Bush pulled America out of the Kyoto treaty on climate change, he did so after reading what he called 'important new information'. That information was a report commissioned by David McIntosh, a Federalist Society founder, arguing that toxic emissions were exaggerated and warning of costs to business.

But above all, the society has ousted the legal establishment which - in the form of the profession's traditional representative body, the American Bar Association - has helped oversee the selection of judges and guarantee the profession's integrity for five decades.

Since Eisenhower, the ABA has had a semi-official role in advising on judicial appointments. But in a sudden, little-noticed move last month, President Bush cut the ABA entirely out of the appointment process. The Federalists were delighted, having for years targeted the association (in a special publication, ABA Watch) for such issues as its support for gun control and opposition to the death penalty.

The ABA's removal creates a vacuum in the recommendation of judges, and into it has moved a 15-person committee formed between the White House and Justice Department urgently to seek candidates for some 100 vacancies to federal benches (one-eighth of all judges).

This recommending committee is firmly in the hands of the Federalist Society, controlled by Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson, a society member, and others. Sources add that some 70 judges have so far been interviewed, a quarter of them recommended by the Federalist Society.

The society was founded 20 years ago with a mission to beat back what it saw as a liberal orthodoxy permeating public policy and the courts since the Civil Rights movement.

Society members propelled the attempted impeachment of President Clinton over the Lewinsky scandal. Prosecutor Kenneth Starr was an active member, as were many of his team.

Its major benefactor is the Scaife Foundation, controlled by billionaire conservative magnate Richard Mellon Scaife, who deploys his fortunes to advance right-wing causes. Among those causes was the 'Arkansas Project', initiated by Scaife at a cost of $24 million to mount the suit by Paula Jones - and eventually Lewinsky - against the President.

The first meeting between Scaife and the 'Arkansas Project' was chaired by Theodore Olson, who steered it and is now Solicitor General of the US, the country's most influential lawyer, head of the Federalist Society's Washington chapter, based in the White House.

Olson cut his teeth under Starr in the Reagan administration, and was counsel to Reagan during the Iran-Contra affair. He was himself investigated (but not indicted) by a special prosecutor for lying to Congress, and went on to become chairman of the American Spectator magazine, which 'broke' the Paula Jones story. His wife Barbara is a pivot of the Washington right-wing social circuit, herself chairwoman of a conservative women's organisation funded by Scaife.

>From this background, Olson emerged into the public glare as George Bush's knight and mouthpiece, triumphantly arguing the President's case against the Florida recounts in the Supreme Court and ultimately winning him the election.

The Federalists' other channel to power has been through clerkships at the Supreme Court under sympathetic judges Scalia, Thomas, Kennedy - and Chief Justice William Rehnquist.

Many saw Bush's victory as a watershed moment when the judges put politics above the law. But it is to the future of the court over the next four years - and thence a generation - that the Federalists are looking.

The backgrounds of the Supreme Court's main conservatives are contentious: Justice Rehnquist was author of the memo during the historic Brown vs. Board of Education case in 1952 supporting racial segregation, saying: 'It is about time the court faced the fact that white people in the South don't like the coloured people'.

But Rehnquist and the court's other conservatives have always toiled in counterpoint with liberal appointees and moderate Republicans. However, only this week, a 5-4 verdict on an apparently innocuous case about driving licences in Alabama cut a major inroad into the 1964 Civil Rights Act, ruling that individuals cannot now sue federal agencies over discrimination cases.

In the hands of Bush's legal team now are two possible appointments during his term of office which could swing the court decisively to the right.

The Federalists are not the only group taking care to ensure a conservative federal judiciary. Three right-wing organisations funded by the Scaife Foundation have organised a series of junkets so that judges can attend political seminars on the advantages of deregulation in environment, labour and civil rights law.

They are the Law and Economics Centre, the Liberty Fund and FREE - the Foundation for Research on Economics and the Environment, which funded all-expenses-paid trips, some lasting as long as two weeks, to luxury venues, featuring golf and horse-riding for the justices.

As well as money from the ubiquitous Scaife family, both the FREE and the LEC trips for judges are bountifully funded by oil giants Shell and Exxon, and Philip Morris cigarettes.

Many of the judges who enjoyed them failed - by their own admission - to disclose these junkets on their annual financial reports, as required by their own federal ethics laws, according to the Washington-based watchdog group Community Rights Counsel.

The CRC found that judges' attendance at the junket seminars 'increased significantly between 1992 and 1998' with a record 88 judges taking trips in 1998. With 800 active judges at any time, this means that about 10 per cent of the federal judiciary takes a trip each year.

An exhaustive study by the CRC of seminars and subsequent verdicts by judges who attended them finds 'doctrinal shifts' and 'considerable evidence that the education judges receive' has led to 'a strand of judicial activism that is distinctly pro-market, clearly hostile to federal environmental regulations and decidedly in keeping with the curriculum of FREE seminars'.

"THE WLF GOES INSIDE"

The WLF might sound like another spin-off from the World Wrestling Federation, but it's really in a much bigger league - though it does engage in a kind of wrestling.

Instead of wearing wrestling tights and strutting around a ring, however, the performers in the WLF wear pinstripe suits and strut around courthouses. They are lawyers for the Washington Legal Foundation, a corporate front group that specializes in clogging the courts and administrative agencies with tons of legal filings that are anti-consumer, anti-worker, and anti-environment.

For example, WLF lawyers have recently intervened in auto-safety lawsuits on behalf of Honda and Goodyear, it tried to prevent financial punishment of Exxon for its catastrophic Valdez oil spill, and it stood up for Brown & Williamson Tobacco Company in a case against the FDA. In addition, the foundation produces articles and "educational" programs spouting corporate propaganda on such issues as the public's right-to-know laws and patients-rights laws. It is also a major proponent of corporate "civil liberties" and corporate "free speech." It just might be that WLF's fervor for all-things-corporate stems from the fact that the bulk of its funding flows from corporate interests.

Now, this anti-government outsider has quietly moved inside, as George W. Bush—who also embraces all-things-corporate—has placed many WLFers into key positions. For example cabinet members John Ashcroft, Gale Norton, Tommie Thompson, and Spencer Abraham serve on WLF advisory boards, and Energy Secretary Abraham and Interior Secretary Norton also are listed as "educational program speakers" for this cozy corporate club. Attorney General Ashcroft also is staffing the justice department with WLF alums, including his deputy AG, and his assistant AG for anti-trust

This is Jim Hightower saying...WLF's infiltration of the Bush presidency represents the continuing corporatization of our government.

Official Position of WLF from their website.

The Washington Legal Foundation (WLF) has one goal: to defend and promote the principles of free enterprise and individual rights.

Since it was founded 24 years ago, WLF has developed into the nation's preeminent center for public interest law—advocating free-enterprise principles, limited government, property rights, and reform of the civil and criminal justice system.

WLF is a unique institution with three essential cornerstone programs:
 • shaping public policy through aggressive litigation and advocacy;
 • publishing timely legal studies; and
 • educating policy-makers and the public through extensive communications outreach.

I need each of you to email me with a list of calls you need the Judge to make. He has made many but I need to put together a new list so we can see where we are.

Please provide me with the following information so I can plug everything into a spreadsheet for him:

Name of Senator

State

Names of potential nominees and seat

Any other notes

I can easliiy plug in phone numbers and names of chief of staff or other contact - but if you want to provide this info that is OK by me.

on the ethical manner to contact political appointees to help with various political causes including special elections. Time is of the essence on this one. Would like to hit WH staff and sched c and the Hill. Need to know who should send the communication and what can be said, and does the message need to be different for each group or all the guidelines the same. Obviously email is the most practical method.

Any changes to the circuit candidate list? We are ready to go to war.

Adam, I'm very sorry, but Brett and I are in charge of rolling out the President's first judicial nominations next week. We're totally frantic until that happens. I don't see us being able to do this until Thursday or Friday next week. If we were any less jammed up, we would, but the heat is really intense on us right now. Please apologize to NARA for us and ask them to bear with us a few more days. Thanks.

Brad/Brett--Thanks, I've passed this on to Phil. As of last night, he wanted to proceed today anyway. If that's still the case, I'll make note of the points where I think you and Brett may have a perspective or should weigh in. I think a large part of this for Phil is to begin a face to face dialogue with NARA, so we may not get to some of the more technical aspects yet anyway.
Good luck with squaring away the nominations. Adam

Brad/Brett--Thanks, I've passed this on to Phil. As of last night, he wanted to proceed today anyway. If that's still the case, I'll make note of the points where I think you and Brett may have a perspective or should weigh in. I think a large part of this for Phil is to begin a face to face dialogue with NARA, so we may not get to some of the more technical aspects yet anyway.
Good luck with squaring away the nominations. Adam

Adam, I'm very sorry, but Brett and I are in charge of rolling out the President's first judicial nominations next week. We're totally frantic until that happens. I don't see us being able to do this until Thursday or Friday next week. If we were any less jammed up, we would, but the heat is really intense on us right now. Please apologize to NARA for us and ask them to bear with us a few more days. Thanks.

Brad--Phil's assistant just called to let me know that he would definitely like to have the meeting with NARA tomorrow. I had mentioned to her that next week was much better for you. She proposed 1pm--I mentioned that morning was better for you, but apparently Phil's morning is full. Is 1 pm tomorrow a possibility for you and Brett?

In the mean time, I will call NARA and see how this works for them.

Brett:

Your e-mail was interesting on the President's speech that said "I believe that our government should support the works of charity that are motivated by faith -- but our government should never fund the teaching of faith, itself." When I saw the draft speech, I viewed the quoted sentence as simply reflecting that we're for "non-discrimination," not "establishment."

Because of the 4:00 cabinet meeting on May 16 we need to move the meeting time for the JSC meeting.

Stacey - Is there a time earlier in the day that the Roosevelt Room is available?

Melissa - FYI that we are moving this. Please let me know if there is a time that works best for Sec. Card.

Will send notice re: new time once we have it.

1. We need to get a working group together asap to design the Wednesday event. My schedule is getting pretty jammed in the next couple days, as you might imagine. Please let me know how we're going to go about getting this accomplished.

2. When we have our final communications package, we need to send 3 copies to David James at DOJ (514-5322) and 3 copies to Tim Goeglin in Public Liaison. That's in addition to the others inside the WH and up in the Senate that we've discussed. (Z will know who up in the Senate besides Hatch's staff needs it. I think John Mashburn in Lott's office needs it, plus Ed Haddon in Sessions' office and Steve Higgins in Kyl's.)

Christa--I have proposed the Friday 11 am time to NARA and will advise once they confirm. Any chance we can get the conference room in 145 again?

Brett--I'm hoping that Friday is better than Thursday for you as well. Let us know if this is a problem.

After the 10 a.m. meeting this morning we huddled with Gordon, the Counsel's office, Public Liaison and others to hammer out Wednesday's event and action items. We used Bartlett's guidance and other input on the event. The President's briefing is due at 3 p.m. today so please let me know ASAP if there are serious problems with any of this. Here are details and action items:

REV_00126234

Event:

East Room -- open press
Crowd is families and guests of nominees
Judges preset on front row (to the President's left from the podium)
Blue Goose
President enters East Room, proceeds to podium
President makes remarks (roughly 10 minutes)
After remarks President shakes hands with nominees and departs room for post-event reception.

Action Items:

1. Event logistics will be handled by Communications
2. Counsel's office will work on reception, inviting and clearing of guests with Social office, etc.
3. There will be a 1 p.m. meeting today in 196 OEOB to finalize the paper, binders, etc. It is imperative that everyone be there for this meeting.
4. DEADLINE ON ALL TALKING POINTS AND PAPERS IS COB TODAY
5. Rollout strategy needs to be set. Question is do we get binders, all our information, etc to our allies tomorrow or wait until 6. Wednesday? Do we have Counsel's office do backgrounders tomorrow for running in Wed papers?
7. Communications will craft press packet (in consultation with Counsel's office)

Let me know if I have missed anything.

Ok, we had a great 1 p.m. "paper" meeting. Here's the schedule:

1. In the next hour I will send Counsel's office the final draft of the binder. They will edit and return to my ASAP.
2. By COB today (6 p.m.) the binder will be done by counsel and by Communications.
3. Tonight Fleischer, Bartlett and others will be able to take home paper on the nominations to begin to read up.
4. Tomorrow morning at 9 a.m. printing begins on the binders.
5. There will be 2 sets of information produced today -- 1 set for the press as a press packet and 1 set for private use.
6. Counsel is putting together by COB today a 1-pager with (1) the DOJ vetter's contact information for each judge, (2) the White House counsel contact for each judge, and (3) the contact information for each nominee. We will be able to reach all these folks 24 hours a day for rapid responses to inquiries, etc.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Jim

He would also be interested in

Subject: Re: 100 day Cath call

Matthew2:

Wednesday morning at 9 am is the new time for the weekly Catholic teleconference: we want to move on this before the judicial announcement is made tomorrow afternoon. Brad Berenson, of counsel, will fill in all the details on the call to our Catholic supporters.

Also, want to remind everyone that in addition to the 1. CSE meeting yesterday, 2. the weekly conservative teleconference last night, and the 3. 4pm coalition meeting today at CSE, Tim Flannigan will speak at Norquist and Weyrich tomorrow.

One other note: there will be two special teleconferences today at 2pm and 5pm that are being arranged off campus to update key folks about the announcement.

It has shaped up to be a very good coalition week.

Warmly

You are all invited to attend the President's announcement of his first judicial nominations. The event will be tomorrow (May 9, 2001) in the East Room of the White House. Please plan to be at the East Wing by 1:45pm. The President will make remarks at 2:30pm and the event should be concluded by approximately 2:45 or 2:50pm. Because this is a public event with open press, please make sure that your passes are not visible once you enter the East Room.

If you are coming from DOJ, you should plan to be at the East Gate Visitors Entrance of the White House at 1:45pm with a photo ID.

The Social Office has asked that we remind everyone that this event is for the nominees and their families. They asked that we remind staff not to crowd the President and to request that staff not linger too long after the event.

If you have any questions, please contact Jason Torchinsky at 202-456-5049.

Subject: May 9 East Room Announcement of Federal Judicial Appointments

We just received the line by line for tomorrow's announcement. Just want to confirm that the Judge and senior staff do not want to have the nominees seated on the dais with the President. It seems somewhat anticlimatic to not have them surrounding him during such a significant announcement. Thank you for sharing your thoughts.

House Subcommittee OKs Bill
To Establish Privacy Commission
The House Subcommittee on Government Efficiency, Financial Management and Intergovernmental Relations approved a bill May 8 that would establish a commission to make recommendations to Congress on privacy legislation. Four members of the subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Stephen Horn (R-Calif.), voted in favor of sending the bill, H.R. 583, to the full Committee on Government Reform. Rep. Janice D. Schakowsky (D-Ill.) cast the sole dissenting vote.

At issue was an amendment offered by Rep. Carolyn B. Maloney (D-N.Y.) that would have changed the balance on the commission by requiring a super majority, rather than a simple majority, of its 17 members to approve a recommendation. In addition, the amendment would have required the commission to examine whether Congress and the Office of the President should be subject to the Freedom of Information and Privacy acts, as are federal agencies.

Maloney withdrew her amendment after one of the bill's sponsors, Rep. Asa Hutchinson (R-Ark.), assured her during the markup that he would work to resolve her concerns before the full committee takes it up.

Hutchinson later told reporters he was confident he could resolve differences with Maloney and others concerned about what is not expressly stated in the bill, saying he did not want "a narrow issue" to sink the measure.

Hutchinson and Rep. James P. Moran (D-Va.) introduced the bill Feb. 13 (32 DER A-22, 2/15/01). An identical measure failed on the House's suspension calendar last year.

H.R. 583 would set up a bipartisan Privacy Protection Commission, which would have a maximum of 18 months to study privacy issues and report to Congress on its findings, including any recommendations for legislation.

Parker was actually saying things to his daughter-- I couldn't tell if he was telling her to behave or telling her how to use her camera.

Subject: NFRW Event today

This is to document Counsel's advice with respect to the National Federation of Republican Women (NFRW) event that is scheduled for today and that you just discussed with me.

The NFRW's Regents group is coming to the White House Residence today to meet with Mrs. Bush. The NFRW's invitation to the event required the members of the Regents to contribute $300 simply to come to this event. The invitations also indicated that one could join the Regents for $1000, pay the extra $300 as well, and thereby attend the event. As such, the event is in the nature of a fundraiser. A political group's fundraiser cannot occur on government office property, and any sort of fundraiser (political or otherwise) on any kind of federal government property (office or otherwise) triggers a host of appearance concerns.

Because today's event is in the Residence, there are no legal problems with today's event, but there are serious appearance problems. We therefore request that you follow one of two options.

First, the event may be held in the Residence so long as (i) each person who paid the $300 for the event is promptly reimbursed the $300 by NFRW and (ii) each person in attendance today who joined the Regents after the time this invitation was sent out is reimbursed an additional $1000 by NFRW. We should ensure that NFRW agree to these requirements in advance and documents its future compliance with these requirements. If it agrees, then this event will be in the nature of a typical meeting or party where an outside group comes to the White House Residence. As such, the event should pose no particular legal or appearance concerns.

Second, and alternatively, the event as currently structured may be held at a site off government property and outside the White House.

If you have further questions, please contact me or Moose Cobb.

Subject: More Judges

B and M2:

Might the four of us sit down today for a few minutes to go over a) the high/low points of this week vis a vis the judges?, b) the calendar for the next two weeks, and c) any coalition activity we want to pursue in the course of the next few days?

I will happily adjust my calendar to everyone else's.

I propose we meet for a half hour or less at 11 am today? Okay?

Warmly,

tsg

Subject: More Judges

On behalf of the Counsel's Office, I will be sheparding the next 11 (plus or minus) judicial nominees through the final stages of the nomination process. We have tentatively scheduled to have the President nominate this group during the week of May 21 -- with three on the 21st, three on the 22nd, two on the 23rd, and three on the 24th. Obviously all of this can -- and likely will -- change many times between now and then, so please keep it close to the vest.

We plan to have talking points prepared for each, along with names of individuals who are prepared to speak to the press on each candidate's behalf. But since this group will not go out with the pomp and circumstance of the last group, I was wondering if you'd provide me with some guidance on what you might need from me and when in order to address all the communications, outreach, and leg affairs issues. Also, please advise if you think sending up these nomination in a stream, as opposed to a slate, is a bad idea. Thanks for your help.

I'm referring to the sheet they prepared for the first slate which showed 24-hour contact info for (1) the nominee, (2) the WHC attorney responsible for that nominee, and (3) the DOJ vetter who reviewed the nominee's full record.

If by "contact info" you are referring to either 3d party supporters or contact info for the nominee himself or herself, that is covered on the spreadsheet I sent around, and Brent and Jason are aware that they need to collect it. If you mean something else, please explain, because I am not sure what you would be referring to.

For next week's nominees, in addition to the talking points I know you guys are already collating, we're also going to need the contact list for the press office and DOJ. Please add to your to-do list compiling the same type of contact info for WHC, DOJ, and nominees that you compiled for the last group. Thanks.

Edwards Seeking Legislation from the Bench

by John Nowacki

"We should be nominating judges. Whether it is a Democratic or a administration, it shouldn't make any difference in nominating well-qualified judges. This body should act on the qualification of those men and women to serve on the court, not based upon the Republican or Democratic composition of the court. It is just that simple. This should be totally nonpartisan." So said Senator John Edwards (D-NC) in October of last year, when there were 34 fewer vacancies in the federal courts than there are today. And, assuming that he meant to say "confirming" instead of "nominating," he was absolutely right.

When the President -- any President -- nominates someone for a federal judgeship, that nominee's party affiliation should not be a consideration. Presidents and the Senators who must confirm the nominees should look to whether the candidate for a judgeship is fair, impartial, and of the right temperament. They should also make certain that those confirmed to the federal bench are dedicated to upholding the law, and not to legislating their partisan political agenda from the bench. A qualified judge -- the kind Senator Edwards was talking about -- is one who takes his oath of office seriously and understands that judges are to apply and interpret the law, leaving the re-writing of law to the legislature.

Unfortunately, Edwards seems to have forgotten everything he said about the need for non-partisan confirmations in the months since Election Day.

When President Bush announced 11 nominations to the U.S. Courts of Appeals last week, Edwards announced that he would hold up Terrence Boyle, the nominee from North Carolina, unless the President nominated the Senator's choice for a circuit judgeship. Why? Pure partisanship.

"Until we find some constructive process that allows for balance, then I would not support any nominee, including Judge Boyle," Edwards said.

According to the Associated Press, Edwards suggested his cooperation could be gained by the re-nomination of state judge James Wynn -- a Clinton nominee whom Edwards apparently believes would "balance" Judge Boyle's elevation to the Court of Appeals.

President Bush has been very clear about his standard for judicial selection. When he presented his nominees on May 9, Bush said: "Every judge

I appoint will be a person who clearly understands the role of a judge is to interpret the law, not to legislate from the bench. To paraphrase . . .

James Madison, the courts exist to exercise not the will of men, but the judgment of law. My judicial nominees will know the difference."

So . . . Bush says that his nominees will be men and women who will exercise restraint and respect the constitutional separation of powers. What is it that needs balancing here? The partisan interests that Edwards condemned on the Senate floor just seven months ago?

Of course, that's precisely what Edwards is worried about. He wants judges who have the Democrats' stamp of approval and who are perfectly willing to legislate from the bench. Just take a look at the man whom he would nominate if he were President (and whom he's trying to nominate, even though he's not).

As a judge on the North Carolina Court of Appeals, James Wynn wrote that the state supreme court should revoke a municipality's sovereign immunity from tort liability, even though that would be a clear usurpation of the legislature's role.

During a brief stint on the North Carolina Supreme Court, Wynn held that when determining the duty of care a homeowner owes to licensees and invitees on his property, the common law distinction between the two was abolished and replaced with a single standard. The Chief Justice of that very court

-- who concurred in the result of the case only -- wrote that it was "unadvisable to render an opinion of that magnitude" when no party had suggested the modification and the court did not have the benefit of arguments and briefs on the issues decided by the majority. According to the Greensboro News & Record, Wynn's position actually "scrapped more than

century of existing law."

Wynn's nomination went nowhere in the last Congress because of his clear record as a judicial activist -- not because he was a Clinton nominee (the Republican Senate confirmed nearly two-thirds of Clinton's judicial nominees, allowing him to nearly match Ronald Reagan's record for judicial appointments). That record of judicial activism -- ruling according to what he thought the law should be, rather than what it actually is -- is what prevented his confirmation and what should prevent his re-nomination today. As Senators proceed to give their advice and consent, they should remember that we need judges who meet the standard Bush set forth. If Senator Edwards can demonstrate that Boyle is someone who does and will legislate from the bench, then he is right to block that nomination. But if he can't, then he is engaging in the same behavior that he condemned in that speech last year. According to Senator Edwards, ideological litmus tests for judges were wrong last October. Edwards should recall his own words and recognize that if he wants to remain credible at all, they should still be wrong today.

Here's another one - I have several bills from Airlift Ops for the First Lady's meals on an airplane when she is traveling separately from the POTUS. Is this considered personal - or does the purpose of the trip determine the paying entity? vbm

The Judge and Tim have requested three additional long-form memoranda of the kind we all prepared a few weeks back. They have asked me and Brett to search for volunteers to do another round. Anyone not overwhelmed in the next few weeks and willing to take this on?

I believe he needs a status report as to where we are in the process of deciding the California District Court Judges. If this does not make sense given the timeline you are working on, I will ask TEF to be more specific, but I believe this is what he wants.

Tim has requested some basic info on the California District Court decisions. He does not want anything to have to be put together, but was wondering if there was something that you already had that he could look at. Thx.

You may attend a political event and speak at the event. A political entity such as a campaign committee may pay for your travel to the event, but an authorization form must be filled out in connection with such payment. (Rachel Brand of Counsel's office oversees implementation of the travel approval process. Jason Torchinsky is the point of contact for the forms.) The two primary "don'ts" in connection with these activities: 1) You may not engage in the solicitation of funds, and 2) Because this is not an official Government activity, you may not permit the use of your Gov't title in connection with the event. Therefore, it would be inappropriate for the political entity to state on the invitation: Brian Conklin, Spec Asst

Courtney, given the amount of work involved, I would encourage that we have 2 people do the next slate, particularly since that slate has so many names. I leave that decision to you all, but doing so would make life easier on Rachel, lessen the chance of any mistakes, and involve another lawyer in our office in this rather interesting part of our job.

Bill Riley just called to say that a woman at Creighton University (where Riley is an adjunct) had been contacted by a man claiming to represent an information agency advising the Chinese government. The man asked a series of vague questions about materials from Creighton's general counsel; the Creighton woman responded that she didn't know what he was talking about. The man left his name, phone number, and the Chinese agency he claimed to represent. I suspect that this is some nut; but out of an abundance of caution I told Brad Wiegmann at the NSC who is going to see if the Chinese entity exists. Anyway, please let me or Brad know if any of the other nominees learn of similar phone calls.

Patrick,

Can you send a request on letterhead to Wendy Nipper (fax 202-456-5684) in the WH Media Affairs Office explaining how you want to use the photos, the manner in which you want to receive the photos (e-mail, print, etc) and your contact information? Wendy will handle getting you the photos you need. Sorry this took so long to figure out. We're still getting used to all of the processes over here.

Thanks,
Jason

Subject: New Recommended Telephone Call Format

The format for the recommended telephone call has changed slightly since we are now getting the Chief of Staff's approval on all telephone call requests. Attached is a template for the new format. Also, would it be possible for you to e-mail the recommended telephone call to Harriet Miers, John Gardner, Barbara Barclay, Debra Bird, Sherry Kuntz, and Carol Cleveland in addition to submitting the original with 5 copies. If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to call our office. We would appreciate your sharing this new format with the staff in your area. Thank you.

FYI - the Judge's family is moving to DC the first week in June so starting then I will be making every attempt to get him out the door at 6:30 or 7:00 pm so he can be with his family.

That means judicial interviews need to happen between around 4:00 and 6:00 or 6:30.

Thanks!

Ok - here is the deal.

We have discussed the request from Doug McCollum from American Lawyer/The NY Times. Another request is expected shortly from Elizabeth Frater at National Journal.

Some of you don't want to give resumes/bios to reporters - some of you don't care. The Judge does not have an opinion one way or the other - we send his resume to anyone who asks for it.

I am sending to Doug the Jan. 18 release that has very limited information (name, most recent job/firm, undergrad school and law school). I am faxing a copy over to Lori so you can get a copy of this from her if you want to see it. Included in this release is information on Tim, Chris, Brad, Stuart, Brett, Helgi, Courtney, Noel and Rachel.

Addington, Bellinger, Cobb and Flippin - your names are not in this release. If you want them to have this info on you please let me know so we can forward it.

Is anyone working on or know anything about a Presidential directive to rescind (sp) a President Clinton Order involving implementation of a NAFTA provision on trucking?

If so please call Joel Kaplan - 456-1987.

Thanks!

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the tone we've been trying to change!

best, ed g.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax), excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade, government control of existing power lines and energy plants, and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21st Century.

REMEMBER THE '70s?

Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans - they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage.

A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday
New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

The 21CEP will serve as a counterbalance to the liberal groups who oppose increased energy production and seek government-mandated reductions in energy consumption.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

End Original ARMS Header

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's

best, ed g.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax), excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade,

government control of existing power lines and energy plants,

and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21st Century.

REMEMBER THE '70s?

Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans - they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage.

A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday
New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

The 21CEP will serve as a counterbalance to the liberal groups who oppose increased energy production and seek government-mandated reductions in energy consumption.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

By Thomas L. Jipping

When Democrats take control of the Senate next week, they will shut down the judicial confirmation process.

REV_00127199

While majority status - and with it control of the Senate's agenda and process - provides them new weapons, the Democrats' unprecedented campaign to block President Bush's judicial appointments began months ago. What they had begun to do defensively, however, they now can do offensively. The Democratic obstruction campaign includes a series of tactics and misleading rhetoric.

According to the New York Times, for example, incoming Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy plans to "block any judicial nominees ... [who] would tip the balance of the federal courts." That's the tactic. Here's the rhetoric: Tipping whatever balance Democrats wish to preserve would be, in Senator Leahy's words, "ideological court-packing."

This argument is not new. Democrats took control of the Senate with a Republican in the White House in 1987. They used the book "God Save This Honorable Court" by Harvard law professor Laurence Tribe to change the rules confirmation engagement. Focusing on the Supreme Court, he urged the Senate to reject even eminently qualified nominees who would change the Court's "balance" in either a liberal or conservative direction. The Senate, he wrote, was "a ballast" needed to correct "the drift of the Supreme Court as represented by a given appointment."

Well, here we go again. Professor Tribe met with 42 Senate Democrats in April to again plot confirmation strategy. With their majority windfall, Senator Leahy is again singing from the Tribe script but this time applying its radical tune to all judicial appointments.

Senate Democrats don't care that the Constitution gives the power to appoint judges to the president, not to them. And they don't care about any sort of "balance" in general. Rather, dressed in Professor Tribe's misleading rhetoric for public relations consumption only, they care about preserving a particular "balance" because they like the decisions that balance produces.

When they sang Professor Tribe's tune in 1987, Senate Democrats sought to preserve a Supreme Court balance that had produced decisions on abortion and other subjects generally to their liking. Suiting up again as Professor Tribe's loyal confirmation soldiers, they want to preserve an overall balance produced by President Clinton's 374 judicial appointments. With 55 percent of all full-time judges Democrat appointees, it's no wonder they are now playing the "balance" game.

As in 1987, it's a tough sell to claim that President Bush may not appoint qualified men and women who will interpret rather than make law. Lots of junior high kids still learn in civics class that judges aren't supposed to make law. Coached by Professor Tribe, Senate Democrats instead want to change the subject altogether and use the rhetoric of maintaining some sort of balance, of preventing that "ideological court-packing" thing.

There's a certain weird consistency here. The activist judges whose power these Democrats now want to preserve, change and morph the Constitution and statutes, tweaking the meaning here and adding a few provisions there, rearranging the law as they go along to suit their political taste. Then, when judges have reworked everything to the liberals' liking, we hear the call to respect judicial precedents and honor the "rule of law." Whether it's this fake, politically-driven devotion to the rule of the law or the present call for preserving the "balance of the federal courts," Senate Democrats simply want a judiciary imposing liberal results the people have rejected.

How will Senate Democrats implement this "balance" rule, especially now that it apparently applies to the entire judiciary? Of the 101 vacancies on the federal district and appeals courts today, 61 had been filled by Republican appointees, 27 by Democrat appointees, and 13 resulted from creation of new positions. Will they demand that President Bush appoint only Democrats to replace vacating Democrats? This approach will, of course, require some regulations guiding President Bush's appointments to those 13 new positions that have never been filled.

President Bush's recent nomination of Democrat Roger Gregory to a previously unfilled appeals court position apparently does not balance his nomination of Republican Terrence Boyle to a seat formerly held by a Carter appointee. Trained in confirmation politics by Professor Tribe, Senator John Edwards (D-NC), is using the "balance" argument to oppose the Boyle nomination until President Bush nominates liberal state court judge James Wynn to another appeals court vacancy.

Senator Leahy's "balance of the federal courts" rule might refer to ideology rather than simply to party affiliation. This, of course, lacks even a claim of objectivity and would require the very ideological litmus tests that Democrats once condemned.

The wild card in all this is the position of incoming Majority Leader Tom Daschle. On May 6, before Senator James Jeffords' party defection made him majority leader, he insisted "we don't want right-wingers" on the bench. On May 26, after the defection, he said he does not support Senator Charles Schumer's vow that "no more of these right-wing judges [will] be getting through." Senator Daschle is simply playing the good cop to Senator Schumer's bad cop. Senator Schumer, who serves on Senator Leahy's Judiciary Committee, is already the de facto leader of the confirmation wrecking crew. The bad cop will win.

Senate Democrats are poised to once again drag judicial confirmations into the political swamp. They are using the same song-sheet, prepared by the same composer, as they have before. Tragically, this strategy will once again politicize judicial selection and threaten judicial independence.

Conservatives Remain Bullish Despite Senate Setback

By ROBIN TONER

REV_00127201

W <<http://graphics.nytimes.com/images/dropcap/w.gif>> ASHINGTON, May 30 - Confronting the loss of the first all-Republican government in nearly 50 years, after a scant four months in power, many conservatives profess to be undaunted.

Angry, yes. Senator James M. Jeffords's decision to leave the party and become an independent, which threw the Senate to the Democrats, was denounced today by Senator Trent Lott, the outgoing majority leader, as "a coup of one," on a radio show popular with conservative listeners.

Conservatives have concluded that it is Mr. Jeffords who is to blame for the sudden Senate power shift, not them - an argument that Mr. Lott was more than happy to embrace on his own behalf.

"There is only one person to blame for all this, and that's Jim Jeffords," said Mr. Lott, who appeared to be trying to shore up his base after a week of criticism from all sides, including some from the right. "He was often very liberal in his views and quite often agreed more with Ted Kennedy" than other Republicans, Mr. Lott added.

In defiance of the newly Democratic Senate, many conservative leaders are urging President Bush to hang tough and keep pushing for conservative principles, particularly, some say, on judicial nominations. Not surprisingly, they reject the idea that the Republicans lost Mr. Jeffords and the Senate because the Bush administration tacked too far to the right. In fact, some conservatives say the Jeffords defection shows the folly of trying too hard to mollify the party's moderates.

That tough tone was reflected in a Jeffords headline in the conservative journal Human Events: "Extremist Senator Quits G.O.P." Phyllis Schlafly, president of the Eagle Forum, described the Jeffords move as "kind of a stab in the back to all his friends in the Senate." In a column for National Review, Stephen Moore, president of the Club for Growth, a conservative political action committee, declared dismissively, "Jeffords was a political dinosaur, a throwback to an era long gone."

David Keene, chairman of the American Conservative Union, said, "The other moderates say the lesson in this is that George Bush and the Congressional leadership ought to let them steer the ship. But they are, after all, the tail and not the dog."

Mr. Keene, in a sentiment echoed by other conservatives, argued that giving too much power and cutting too many deals with Mr. Jeffords and other moderates over the years had helped blur the image of Senate Republicans and ultimately weaken their majority.

The conservatives' reaction is complicated - and tempered - by the remarkable victory they won, almost simultaneously, on the $1.35 trillion tax cut that was the centerpiece of the Bush and the conservative agenda. At the regular Wednesday meeting today of his influential "center-right coalition," the conservative strategist Grover Norquist argued that the tax cut essentially tied the hands of the new Democratic majority.

"Nothing that Daschle wants or Ted Kennedy wants is for free," Mr. Norquist said. Senator Tom Daschle of South Dakota is expected to become the majority leader and Senator Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts is in line to be chairman of the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee.

"We're going to spend the next two years talking about how the Democrats in the Senate want to spend your money," Mr. Norquist said later. "This is not a loser position; this is a winning position."

Mr. Norquist was bullish about the prospects of more tax cuts, in defiance of conventional wisdom, including a cut in the capital gains tax.

Under the glass-half-full analysis, many conservatives argued that the Democrats will now be clearly held accountable for spending, for obstructing presidential initiatives, for blocking nominations. Asked if the party was, in fact, better off without Mr. Jeffords, Mr. Norquist said, "For the purposes of the 2002 election, the answer is yes."

If the party cannot have a true, governing majority in the Senate, the argument goes, better a sharp contrast to help win a majority in the next election.

Mr. Lott advanced a similar argument today, in back-to-back interviews with the Oliver L. North and Sean Hannity radio programs. While he would rather remain in the majority, Mr. Lott said, there was "something liberating about being in the minority" and being freer to push the proposals "you really think should be adopted."

He seemed to look forward to devising his party's new, minority strategy, now that talk of a challenge to his leadership from other Republican senators had quieted down.

Others, however, are more openly worried about the loss of the Senate. Paul Weyrich, a longtime conservative activist, said, "Some are glad that Jeffords is gone; they think it's good riddance. Others, like me, while I didn't particularly care for him in the Republican Party, the change he brought about is a very, very unfortunate development for the Bush agenda, which is largely the conservative agenda. It's going to make it very difficult for the president, very difficult to advance anything at all for the next 18 months."

William Kristol, editor of the conservative Weekly Standard, said he believed that many conservatives were simply in denial. He also noted that the conservative establishment retained a striking amount of faith in the Bush administration and its commitment to the conservative agenda.

"And maybe they're right to do so," Mr. Kristol added. "He delivered the tax cut. But when you ask them, Won't he now deliver a moderate for the Supreme Court, they say, Oh, no, he'll figure out a way" to get around the difficult politics.

In fact, there is widespread agreement that judicial nominations are where the loss of the Senate will be felt most acutely. But Richard Lessner, executive director of American Renewal, the lobbying arm of the conservative Family Research Council, argues that Mr. Bush will get a fight from liberal Democrats almost regardless of whom he nominates.

"We would like the president to stick to his oft-repeated promise from the campaign that he will nominate strict constructionists and his model will be Justices Thomas and Scalia. If he sticks to that, we'll be very happy," Mr. Lessner said - and Mr. Bush will be able to count on an energized conservative base.

In the end, many conservatives seemed unconvinced by the conventional wisdom that Mr. Bush must now, fundamentally, shift his agenda.

"Punditry analysis is like water off a duck's back to conservatives," said Ed Gillespie, a conservative lobbyist and strategist. "There aren't many of us in the punditocracy. From our perspective, we can still govern in a center-right capacity, which is how Mr. Bush has governed, and be successful doing so."

And as for the accusation that conservatives lack tolerance for the party's moderates and liberals, Mr. Keene said, "While I think in most cases these are folks who ought to be welcomed to the party, and we ought to work with them on issues when you agree, I can tell you that when Jim Jeffords and his friends were in charge, they didn't give a lot of time to conservatives."

Brett--Per the attached e-mail, we are prepared to have future bulk e-mail to the President (and First Lady) sent only to the WHO bucket, as opposed to both the WHO and OA buckets, since these are not OA records. Of course we can make more changes in the future (such as a system that would allow disposal of bulk e-mail akin to its paper counterpart) if the White House would like to take that course at some later date.

Since this solution could also be applied to bulk e-mail to the Vice President and Mrs. Cheney, I thought it would be a good idea to mention this to David so we can do this at this same time (understanding that it's possible that there may be some differences). David, it would be great if you can also indicate if you would like us to proceed along the same course as the White House. Adam, 5-1268

Adam;

We can change the designation of the sending account in NOTES so that NOTES will indicate to ARMS that the account has no agency designation. This will then cause ARMS to place the POTUS bulk mail in the WHO bucket only and the Vpotus mail in the VPO bucket only.

[EMAIL #1:

From the NRCC to Schedule C's:]

The Republican Party is looking for volunteers...

As you know, the special election in Virginia's 4th Congressional District is an excellent opportunity to add to our majority -- it is a highly competitive swing district. Leading up to Election Day, one of the most important resources will be a broad volunteer grassroots organization for canvassing in key precincts.

To carry through on this, the Republican Party is organizing weekly bus trips for volunteers to the greater Richmond area of the district. Each Saturday until Election Day (June 19th), we will be sending buses down into the district. The buses will be leaving from 310 First Street, SE (Eisenhower Building) at 8:00 AM on these Saturdays.

If you are interested in participating and increasing our majority, please RSVP to research@nrcc.org <mailto:research@nrcc.org> . If you have any questions or comments, you can email the address as well or call Kris Skrzycki at (202) 479-7048. Any time that you can provide will go a long way to ensuring victory.

Earlier today you received an email from the RNC about helping out in the special election in the 4th District of Virginia. This request has been approved by Counsel. You are legally permitted to help while off-duty. I encourage you to join the Republican volunteers this weekend who are going down to the Richmond area to help out.

Frader has called Judge Luttig, too. The lengths to which this reporter is going suggests to me that she is doing more than a story that will run in the local L.A. legal rag. But I hope I am wrong.

This National Journal reporter is apparently calling around to people and saying "Judge Gonzales knows of and approves this article, so you can talk to me." Needless to say, this has caught some people who have been called by her quite off guard. Should someone rein her in? [My vote: YES.] Soon? [Yes.]

FYI,

Attached below is a copy of the amendments that the House Government Reform Committee adopted in its mark-up of HR 577 on May 17th. The reported text is not yet available on THOMAS. As I've said in earlier e-mails, this bill could go to the floor as early as next week.

FYI, and OLC probably advised you of this already, but Rosemary Hart recently gave me a call to say there are looking to hire some (2-3) young line attorneys. She was looking for recommendations of "clerk types" 1-2 years out of law school, but I did not really know of any people in that age/experience range.

Top attorney working for state, but eyeing old job

By MICHAEL STEWART, Daily News Staff Writer

Former U. S. Attorney Michael Patterson is working at the Florida State Attorney's Office for now, but he's hoping he won't be much longer.

Patterson, appointed by former President Bill Clinton as the U. S. attorney for the Northern District of Florida in 1993, stepped down from the federal post Thursday, but he still has an eye on his old job.

"Whether I will be able to keep my position, though, is up for grabs," Patterson said.

Patterson has said he hopes President Bush will reappoint him as the lead federal attorney in the Northern District, which covers 23 counties from Pensacola to Gainesville.

The former Demo-crat abandoned his party ties last February and switched to Re-publican prior to submitting his application to keep his position.

A call to the State Attorney's Office in Pensacola Friday confirmed that Patterson is now working for the state. He was unavailable for comment.

"Basically, he is just helping out with some projects at the State Attorney's Office until the appointment process is over," U. S. Attorney spokesperson Gayle Kinsley said.

U. S. Attorney General John Ashcroft appointed the number two man in the Northern District, Tom Kirwin, to fill in until a new attorney is appointed. Kirwin is not seeking the position.

Speculation about Patterson's prospects has loomed since his decision to seek reappointment. The chances of a former Democrat retaining the position under the Bush administration are slim, many say.

Patterson, who has long maintained an apolitical stance, has won the backing of some influential Republicans who would like to see the power base remain in Pensacola.

U. S. Rep. Joe Scarborough, R-Fla., has been one of Patterson's strongest allies. Scarborough's decision to leave the House has some people wondering if Patterson still has the clout to reclaim his former job.

"I don't know what is going to happen," Santa Rosa County Republican Party

Chairman Rodney Rollo said.

"It is all speculation at this point."

Patterson's Thursday resignation coincided with the deadline for applicants to apply for the post.

The chairman for the Florida Federal Judicial Nominating Commission, Roberto "Bobby" Martinez, said several applicants have sent in resumes, but the list will not be made available until Wednesday.

"I have not even looked at them yet, and more applications postmarked by Thursday could come in," he said.

Tampa prosecutor Kenneth Lawson, an assistant U. S. attorney for the Middle District of Florida, is the only other candidate to publicly state he is seeking the Northern District position.

Members of the nominating commission will meet in Tallahassee on June 18 to review the applications.

The commission will interview the applications on June 29 and could decide on three candidates for the position that day. If approved by U. S. Reps. Bill Young and Clay Shaw, both Republicans, and by Gov. Jeb Bush, the names will be sent to President Bush, who will choose his nominee.

The final confirmation falls to the U. S. Senate.

A Crucial Shift at the Judiciary Committee

Democratic control will end the blue slip debate,
revive the ABA,
and put some nominees at risk

REV_00127255

By Jonathan Ringel
Legal Times

In what turned out to be his last hearing as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Utah Republican Orrin Hatch noted on May 23 that a Justice Department nominee sitting before him had the glowing endorsement of Sen. Edward Kennedy. That's high praise, Hatch added, considering that the Massachusetts Democrat had chaired the panel himself, "in the good old days."

"Soon to return," quipped Kennedy.

The very next day, Vermont Sen. James Jeffords' defection from the GOP set a new course for the committee-and for President George W. Bush's judicial candidates.

"This changes every little thing," said Sen. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.), a member of the committee and a vocal opponent of many of Bush's conservative picks. "In fact, it changes the little things more than the big things."

It's the little things that count in the committee, the gateway to Senate confirmation for judicial and Justice Department nominees.

From "blue slips" that can block a nominee from getting a confirmation vote to the role of the American Bar Association-and from the membership of the committee itself to the future composition of the federal district and circuit courts-most everything was promised a new look after Jeffords' stunning move.

One major matter that may not change much is what will happen if and when President Bush gets to nominate someone for the U.S. Supreme Court.

To be sure, Bush's judge-pickers will have to consider the Democrats' control of the Senate if and when the time comes to choose a new justice. But it's doubtful the Democrats would use procedural gimmicks to keep a Supreme Court nominee from getting an up-or-down vote.

When it comes to judges for the trial and appellate courts, though, it's likely the dynamics will shift noticeably.

As a result of the switch, Democrats will have a one-member majority on the committee. The new committee chairman, expected to be Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), will be the arbiter of the committee's blue slip policy. The blue slip is the form senators from a judicial nominee's home state sign to register their approval-and more controversially, their disapproval-of a nominee.

Leahy would undoubtedly enforce his interpretation of the rule, one he argues Republicans used for the past six years to hold up some of President Bill Clinton's choices: No judicial nominee may move forward without positive blue slips from both home-state senators.

Hatch says he's always given "great weight" to negative blue slips, but argued that Leahy's hard-and-fast policy would abuse senatorial courtesy and give too much power to individual senators.

With Jeffords' defection, however, the blue slip debate is effectively over, and Democrats could use the threat of negative blue slips to convince the White House not to nominate conservatives.

Among those in jeopardy are Rep. Christopher Cox (R-Calif.) and Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood litigator Peter Keisler. Both have been prominently mentioned, though not nominated for spots on appeals courts.

California Democratic Sen. Barbara Boxer has said Cox is too conservative to have her support for a spot on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit.

Maryland Democrats Paul Sarbanes and Barbara Mikulski have urged the White House not to nominate Keisler. They oppose the former law clerk to then-D.C. Circuit Judge Robert Bork and Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy on the grounds that he is not a member of the bar in Maryland, where a seat on the 4th Circuit sits vacant.

Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-Ala.) expects some Bush nominees to get hostile hearings, similar to the one Attorney General John Ashcroft endured in January.

But considering that a Senate largely controlled by Republicans confirmed 374 of Clinton's judicial nominees, Sessions adds, "I have to believe the Democrats are not going to use this one-seat advantage to block wholesale nominations.

"They know, just as the Republicans knew, you have to bring those judges up and vote on them sooner or later," he says.

One Bush administration source finds a silver lining in the loss of GOP control. In a 50-50 Senate, the source says, "Everything was a muscle-flexing exercise," adding that now Democrats will be held more accountable and won't be able to be completely obstructionist.

The Democrats say they plan to revive the role of the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary, which since 1953 advised presidents on judicial picks before the nomination was made public.

Bush removed the ABA from its role in March, theoretically speeding up the confirmation process and satisfying conservatives who objected to the group's perceived liberal bias. But Leahy is expected not to call a hearing until the ABA committee has a chance to review a nominee's qualifications, a process that usually takes about one month.

As another result of Jeffords' move, the Judiciary Committee's makeup will have to be renegotiated. Currently split 9-9, the committee may drop Republican Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky or add a new Democrat in order to fashion the new majority.

Before Jeffords left the GOP, Bush added five more judicial nominees to the list before the committee, making a total of 14 circuit court nominations and two district court nominations.

The new nominees are:

Sharon Prost, Republican chief counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee, for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit;
Lavenski Smith, former Arkansas Supreme Court justice, for a seat on the 8th Circuit; William Riley, a litigator in Lincoln, Neb.'s Fitzgerald, Schorr, Barmettler & Brennan, for a Nebraska seat on the 8th Circuit;
Boone, Karlberg & Haddon partner Sam Haddon and U.S. Magistrate Judge Richard Cebull, for U.S. District Court seats in Montana.

A Crucial Shift at the Judiciary Committee

Democratic control will end the blue slip debate,
revive the ABA,
and put some nominees at risk

REV_00127267

By Jonathan Ringel
Legal Times

In what turned out to be his last hearing as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Utah Republican Orrin Hatch noted on May 23 that a Justice Department nominee sitting before him had the glowing endorsement of Sen. Edward Kennedy. That's high praise, Hatch added, considering that the Massachusetts Democrat had chaired the panel himself, "in the good old days."

"Soon to return," quipped Kennedy.

The very next day, Vermont Sen. James Jeffords' defection from the GOP set a new course for the committee-and for President George W. Bush's judicial candidates.

"This changes every little thing," said Sen. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.), a member of the committee and a vocal opponent of many of Bush's conservative picks. "In fact, it changes the little things more than the big things."

It's the little things that count in the committee, the gateway to Senate confirmation for judicial and Justice Department nominees.

From "blue slips" that can block a nominee from getting a confirmation vote to the role of the American Bar Association-and from the membership of the committee itself to the future composition of the federal district and circuit courts-most everything was promised a new look after Jeffords' stunning move.

One major matter that may not change much is what will happen if and when President Bush gets to nominate someone for the U.S. Supreme Court.

To be sure, Bush's judge-pickers will have to consider the Democrats' control of the Senate if and when the time comes to choose a new justice. But it's doubtful the Democrats would use procedural gimmicks to keep a Supreme Court nominee from getting an up-or-down vote.

When it comes to judges for the trial and appellate courts, though, it's likely the dynamics will shift noticeably.

As a result of the switch, Democrats will have a one-member majority on the committee. The new committee chairman, expected to be Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), will be the arbiter of the committee's blue slip policy. The blue slip is the form senators from a judicial nominee's home state sign to register their approval-and more controversially, their disapproval-of a nominee.

Leahy would undoubtedly enforce his interpretation of the rule, one he argues Republicans used for the past six years to hold up some of President Bill Clinton's choices: No judicial nominee may move forward without positive blue slips from both home-state senators.

Hatch says he's always given "great weight" to negative blue slips, but argued that Leahy's hard-and-fast policy would abuse senatorial courtesy and give too much power to individual senators.

With Jeffords' defection, however, the blue slip debate is effectively over, and Democrats could use the threat of negative blue slips to convince the White House not to nominate conservatives.

Among those in jeopardy are Rep. Christopher Cox (R-Calif.) and Sidley, Austin, Brown & Wood litigator Peter Keisler. Both have been prominently mentioned, though not nominated for spots on appeals courts.

California Democratic Sen. Barbara Boxer has said Cox is too conservative to have her support for a spot on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit.

Maryland Democrats Paul Sarbanes and Barbara Mikulski have urged the White House not to nominate Keisler. They oppose the former law clerk to then-D.C. Circuit Judge Robert Bork and Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy on the grounds that he is not a member of the bar in Maryland, where a seat on the 4th Circuit sits vacant.

Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-Ala.) expects some Bush nominees to get hostile hearings, similar to the one Attorney General John Ashcroft endured in January.

But considering that a Senate largely controlled by Republicans confirmed 374 of Clinton's judicial nominees, Sessions adds, "I have to believe the Democrats are not going to use this one-seat advantage to block wholesale nominations.

"They know, just as the Republicans knew, you have to bring those judges up and vote on them sooner or later," he says.

One Bush administration source finds a silver lining in the loss of GOP control. In a 50-50 Senate, the source says, "Everything was a muscle-flexing exercise," adding that now Democrats will be held more accountable and won't be able to be completely obstructionist.

The Democrats say they plan to revive the role of the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary, which since 1953 advised presidents on judicial picks before the nomination was made public.

Bush removed the ABA from its role in March, theoretically speeding up the confirmation process and satisfying conservatives who objected to the group's perceived liberal bias. But Leahy is expected not to call a hearing until the ABA committee has a chance to review a nominee's qualifications, a process that usually takes about one month.

As another result of Jeffords' move, the Judiciary Committee's makeup will have to be renegotiated. Currently split 9-9, the committee may drop Republican Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky or add a new Democrat in order to fashion the new majority.

Before Jeffords left the GOP, Bush added five more judicial nominees to the list before the committee, making a total of 14 circuit court nominations and two district court nominations.

The new nominees are:

Sharon Prost, Republican chief counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee, for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit;
Lavenski Smith, former Arkansas Supreme Court justice, for a seat on the 8th Circuit; William Riley, a litigator in Lincoln, Neb.'s Fitzgerald, Schorr, Barmettler & Brennan, for a Nebraska seat on the 8th Circuit;
Boone, Karlberg & Haddon partner Sam Haddon and U.S. Magistrate Judge Richard Cebull, for U.S. District Court seats in Montana.

Elizabeth:

At the request of Helgard Walker and with the approval of Brett Kavanaugh, I am providing you with the following information regarding files of Jerold Mande who, I understand, was detailed to OPD during the Clinton Administration but worked out of an office assigned to OSTP.

The six boxes that we received from him in December 1998 were assigned the following box numbers in our data base:
13,033, 13,034, 13,035, 13,036, 13,037, and 13,038.
We subsequently assigned them shelf location numbers when we sent them to NARA for courtesy storage. Those sequential numbers ran from 10,455 through 10,460.

This should be more than sufficient information for the archivists at the Clinton project to locate these boxes.

Duke asked me to pass on to you, as a follow-up to your conversation with him re judicial appointments, that he's learned that Edwards' opposition to Boyle is not just a business/political/ideological matter but is based on personal animosity. He suggests that the next time we talk to Edwards we probe this -- perhaps Edwards had a case before Boyle? etc.

According to Duke, Edwards is trying to make inroads into South Carolina (for future Presidential run, presumably) and so the SC people are working him through this back channel.

Finally, Daschle asked Duke to tell the White House that he does not want to be obstructionist on judicial nominees. Duke passed this on to me, but editorialized that of course Daschle does want to obstruct our nominees, just doesn't want to be seen that way.

Brett - Just a follow up to my voice mail. I've been invited to testify before the House International Relations Committee which Congressman Henry Hyde chairs. I haven't had a conversation yet with WH Leg Affairs but Margaret LaMontagne actually wondered if I'm "allowed" to do such a thing. She indicated that she isn't. If you know the answer to this, I'd appreciate knowing as soon as possible. If you don't, please forward. Thanks much.

I am working on the LSC/Texas issue. I have talked with Senators Gramm Inquiry came from Bolten's office - they noticed the binders have been significantly thinner for a while now.

It isn't the room in that is in question - we schedulers are always looking for a way to free up as much time as possible.

Sen. Grassley has been pushing this for years. I'm not familiar with the particulars of any current legislation, but I'll call Scott.

Subject: inquiry from Media Affairs

Do any of you have any knowledge about Senator Grassley legislation to allow camera into federal courtrooms?

Scott Stanzel from Media Affairs could use some insight on this - 456-5688.

Please let me know if you are going to respond to this....

If not no reply necessary.

Thank you.

Gerry Parsky will attend the California Republican caucus lunch next Thursday to discuss, among other things, the judicial selection committees and how the congressmen can participate effectively in that process. Given my responsibility for California district courts going forward, we decided it would be a good idea for me to join him at that session. He has also asked me to see if someone from Leg Affairs would like to join us, which I will do shortly. I wanted to make you all aware of this session so that you could come to represent our office in addition to or instead of me if you thought it advisable.

Anybody know of any important cases lost by the business community in the lower federal courts that at least arguably cost business a lot of money? If not, any bright ideas on how to identify a few such cases?

A few major cases from the telecom world that fit your description: (1) Nextwave lost a case in CA2 involving wireless licenses worth hundreds of millions of dollars; (2) GTE and other local phone companies lost in CA5 in their challenge to universal service subsidies, which amount to huge sums; (3) cable companies lost in CAD9 in their challenge to govt limits on subscribers; and (4) electric utilities lost in CA11 in their attack on laws mandating pole attachments at regulated rates. If you need more examples, let me know -- these are off the top of my head.

I don't see how it is possible to complete the call sheets if we don't know when these people will be nominated.

Gerry Parsky will attend the California Republican caucus lunch next Thursday to discuss, among other things, the judicial selection committees and how the congressmen can participate effectively in that process. Given my responsibility for California district courts going forward, we decided it would be a good idea for me to join him at that session. He has also asked me to see if someone from Leg Affairs would like to join us, which I will do shortly. I'm curious what you found out about the overall picture on nominations.
When are we likely to have nominees up for all or substantially all of the circuit courts? How are we doing on the districts? Is someone keeping track of the overall pipeline?

Tom Jipping complained to me today that he had received no materials at all relating to our judicial nominees. He said he had never received any talking points -- positive or negative -- and no information beyond basic resumes. I'm not sure how this happened, as I felt sure we had circulated virtually everything we had relating to our nominees to the interest group community, but it is obviously a situation that should be rectified going forward. Indeed, we should get out to these folks without further delay, through Tom Jipping or otherwise, the talking points we have currently.

In my view, the actual dissemination of this material on an ongoing basis should be the responsibility of the White House Public Liaison folks. The responsibility for generating it is in the process of shifting from the White House Counsel's Office to the Department of Justice. While the WHCO will continue to generate basic initial talking points, DOJ will take over as of the date of nomination responsibility for refining the basics, monitoring public criticisms of our nominees, and developing responses to likely lines of attack.

I would suggest that we do three things:

1. Have Tim or Matt send out to Tom (or whoever else Tim thinks appropriate) the materials we have currently on our candidates, including the individual talkers and the point-counterpoint. I will ask by copy of this e-mail to have Jason and Brent gather the necessary materials.
2. Have Tim or Matt send out a similar package each time a nomination is made going forward. The package will be provided by the attorney shepherding the nominations at the same time it is forwarded to DOJ, Communications, and the Hill.
3. As charges and countercharges arise in individual confirmation battles, have DOJ furnish the information and materials generated to Tim and Matt. They will then forward to the interest group community.

Tom is not an easy character, and Tim has done a good job keeping him on the reservation. I imagine Tim can fix this with one phone call. We need to work this issue regularly, so we might continue to call on WH Counsel to keep our groups informed. Thanks for going today.

Tom Jipping complained to me today that he had received no materials at all relating to our judicial nominees. He said he had never received any talking points -- positive or negative -- and no information beyond basic resumes. I'm not sure how this happened, as I felt sure we had circulated virtually everything we had relating to our nominees to the interest group community, but it is obviously a situation that should be rectified going forward. Indeed, we should get out to these folks without further delay, through Tom Jipping or otherwise, the talking points we have currently.

In my view, the actual dissemination of this material on an ongoing basis should be the responsibility of the White House Public Liaison folks. The responsibility for generating it is in the process of shifting from the White House Counsel's Office to the Department of Justice. While the WHCO will continue to generate basic initial talking points, DOJ will take over as of the date of nomination responsibility for refining the basics, monitoring public criticisms of our nominees, and developing responses to likely lines of attack.

I would suggest that we do three things:

1. Have Tim or Matt send out to Tom (or whoever else Tim thinks appropriate) the materials we have currently on our candidates, including the individual talkers and the point-counterpoint. I will ask by copy of this e-mail to have Jason and Brent gather the necessary materials.

It seems to me that this is exactly a matter for the recently authorized (and soon to be established) Confirmation Project. Tim Goeglein and Dan Bryant: I will call you tomorrow to speak about the project and ask for your help, but please keep Monday 4:00 free if possible.

For the time being, I agree with Brad that Tom and all outside friends should receive (through Tim) biographical materials and the affirmative talking points (collectively, what I would call the rollout package) for all nominees. However, anticipatory point-counterpoints, as Brett points out, are different and raise a host of countervailing concerns that I hope the Project will take up when it meets on Monday.

Many thanks,

Viet

It may turn out that the potential damage from releasing the attack-response document outweighs whatever assistance these people could provide us.

But merely giving them positive talking points isn't sufficient to allow them to respond to attacks focused on very specific facts or specific incidents that aren't covered in our talking points.

Not to put too fine a point on it, but these people are not as swift as I thought (or they certainly think of themselves) if they cannot manage the relatively simple task of using the positive White House points -- which for the most part have been wide-ranging and answer the likely attacks -- to respond to direct negative attacks. In addition, a White House document that we circulate outside the White House and that contains "likely attacks" on the nominees is a very dangerous document, it seems to me, unless very carefully managed. A leak of it could be quite devastating, at least a leak of some of the "likely attack documents" we have created so far for internal purposes. That is why I had hoped and thought we could count on these folks to use the comprehensive and positively phrased talking points to respond to negative attacks. Guess I had too much confidence in them . . .

I think it's a good idea.
As I said in my e-mail last week, I received the same complaint from the Institute for Justice.
I think they may have received the basic talking points, but they really wanted the point-counterpoint.

I am definitely a purist. Perhaps it is because English is my second language (did I mention that I came over on a boat?!?), but the biggest drag-out fights I have had on degradation of language have been with Eugene Volokh. But then again, maybe Eugene is just confused.

Garner says that the "purists" insist on using "although," but he claims that "while" is permissible usage. We are "purists," I gather.

Brett and I just had lunch with Laurel Pressler, Mike Dewine's Chief of Staff. She is a person who may be quite helpful to us going forward with confirmation issues. She's eager to make your acquaintance and plans to call you soon. Brett and I recommend you take her call and make a little time to establish a relationship.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

For the week of June 11, 2001

I. Key Agency News

Office of the Deputy Attorney General (DAG)

- McVeigh Execution: The execution of convicted Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh is scheduled for Monday, June 11th at 7am (CST) in Terre Haute, IN. On Wednesday, June 6th, in Denver, CO, Judge Richard Matsch denied McVeigh's petition for a stay of execution. The McVeigh execution is the first federal execution in 38 years.
- Garza Execution: Convicted drug kingpin Juan Raul Garza is scheduled to be executed on Tuesday, June 19th. Former President Clinton delayed Garza's execution, originally scheduled for the fall of 2000.

Office of the Solicitor General (OSG)

- Solicitor to Respond to Terry Nichols Request for New Trial: By July 4, per the Supreme Court's June 4th invitation, the Solicitor will file a response to the petition for rehearing of the order denying a writ of certiorari in Nichols v. United States. Petitioner, currently serving a life sentence for his involvement in the Oklahoma City bombing, seeks a new trial alleging that he was prejudiced by the government's improper withholding of potentially exculpatory evidence in FBI files. His original petition for a writ of certiorari was denied, and he now seeks rehearing in light of the recent discovery of several thousand documents related to the bombing investigation that were not turned over to defense counsel during discovery.
- Supreme Court Grants Cert in Challenge to Chicago Permit Requirement: The Department is determining whether participation in the case of Thomas v. Chicago Park District is warranted at this stage. The Department has not participated in the case to date. On May 29, the Court granted a petition for a writ of certiorari in this case, which involves a First Amendment challenge to a Chicago Park District ordinance that requires a permit for any event in a city park that involves more than 50 people or utilizes amplified sound.
- Supreme Court to Review Ninth Circuit's Application of Test for Reasonable Suspicion: On June 4, the Court granted the United States' petition for a writ of certiorari in United States v. Arvizu, No. 00-1519. The questions presented: (1) whether the court of appeals erroneously departed from the totality of the circumstances test that governs reasonable suspicion determinations under the Fourth Amendment by holding that particular facts observed by a law enforcement officer were entitled to no weight and could not be considered as a matter of law; and (2) whether, under the totality of the circumstances test, the Border Patrol agent in this case had reasonable suspicion that justified a stop of a vehicle near the Mexican border. In the petition for a writ of certiorari, the Department contended that the Ninth Circuit's decision in this case departed fundamentally from the Supreme Court's totality-of-the-circumstances test for determining whether reasonable suspicion exists. By declaring as a matter of law that law enforcement officers may not consider certain facts when forming a suspicion of illegal activity, the court of appeals created a direct conflict with decisions of the Supreme Court and other courts of appeals and incorrectly excluded critical evidence in this case.

Office of Legislative Affairs (OLA)

- Ira Einhorn Extradition: The House Government Reform Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, Drug Policy and Human Resources has scheduled a hearing on "Justice Delayed: Extradition and the Ira Einhorn Case" on June 7. The Department met with Subcommittee staff on May 22, and met with the family of the victim on June 6. Criminal Division Deputy Assistant Attorney General Bruce Swartz will testify.

Civil Rights Division (CRT)

- Update on Pattern or Practice Investigation of Cincinnati Police Department: The Division is continuing its pattern or practice investigation of the Cincinnati Police Division's use of deadly and non-deadly force by conducting additional meetings with City and police officials, as well as members of the community, and reviewing relevant documents. On May 7, the Attorney General announced that the Civil Rights division would be conducting a pattern or practice investigation of the CPD's use of deadly and non-deadly force. The Attorney General also committed to provide the City and the Police Division with expert technical assistance on how to best reform their policing practices if needed. On May 23-25, the Division conducted the initial rounds of interviews in its use of force investigation of the CPD.

Civil Division (CIV)

- Ninth Circuit To Hear Oral Argument On June 11 In Tort Case Arising Out Of The Transborder Apprehension Of Plaintiff By The DEA: On June 11, the Ninth Circuit will hear oral argument on whether the transborder apprehension of Humberto Alvarez-Machain supports a false arrest/false imprisonment tort claim and whether it was an actionable violation of international law under the Alien Tort Statute. Plaintiff is a Mexican doctor that U.S. officials believe was involved in the murder of Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) Agent Enrique Camarena-Salazar. Plaintiff was abducted from Mexico by DEA-paid Mexican nationals and brought to the United States so that he could be charged with the murder. At trial, plaintiff was acquitted. He then commenced this suit against the United States, five DEA officials and one member of the Mexican abduction team. The District Court held the agents and the United States immune from plaintiff's claims. Plaintiff appealed. The issues presented on appeal include: whether plaintiff's claim that his apprehension violated international law supports a claim under the Alien Tort Statute; whether the apprehension was authorized by federal law and or CA law; and whether plaintiff's tort claims fall within the foreign country exception of the Federal Tort Claims Act.

Criminal Division (CRM)

- U.S. Files Plea Agreement in Bush Videotape Case: It is anticipated that a plea will be scheduled for June 8 in Austin, TX, in the case of a former office manager and receptionist for the Bush 2000 campaign's chief media consultant. On May 25, in the W.D. TX, a plea agreement was reached with the defendant, who was indicted in March on charges stemming from her release from the Bush-Cheney 2000 presidential campaign of a video tape and documents relating to then-Governor Bush's preparations for the presidential debates. The defendant has agreed to plead guilty to mail fraud and perjury counts in the pending indictments.
- Denaturalization Trial of Accused Nazi: The trial in the N.D. OH of the Government's denaturalization case against John Demjanjuk is expected to go into its third and final week the week of June 11th. The trial commenced on May 29th. Demjanjuk's 1988 conviction in Israel on charges of murders committed while serving as a brutal guard at the Nazis' Treblinka Death Camp known to inmates as "Ivan the Terrible" was reversed by the Israeli Supreme Court in 1993. Demjanjuk's naturalized U.S. citizenship, which had been revoked in 1981 following a denaturalization trial in federal district court in Cleveland, was restored by N.D. OH in February 1998 in the wake of judicial findings that federal prosecutors had committed fraud on the court by withholding exculpatory information from the defendant during the original denaturalization proceedings. A new denaturalization action was filed against Demjanjuk in May 1999 by the Office of Special Investigations (OSI) and the U.S. Attorney's Office in Cleveland, based on Demjanjuk's service as an armed guard at the Sobibor death camp and other Nazi camps in wartime Poland and Germany.

Executive Office for United States Attorneys (EOUSA)

- Interim United States Attorneys to Attend Seminar: Training will be held for interim United States Attorneys June 7-8, in Columbia, SC. The purpose of the training is to discuss their new leadership roles. Topics will include an overview of the Department's initiatives; media and legislative trends; budget and resources; and leadership and coordination as United States Attorneys. The Attorney General is expected to address the group.

Office of Justice Programs (OJP)

- From June 11-15 in Aurora, CO, the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention is sponsoring, together with Fox Valley Technical College and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, a conference regarding "Protecting Children Online."

II. Press Activity

- Multiple media outlets will run stories on the expected execution of Timothy McVeigh, scheduled for Monday, June 11th.

- Several media outlets will run stories on the judicial nominations as the hearings start.
- The NY Times will run a story on National Instant Criminal (background check) System (NICS) record retention by Fox Butterfield (weekend of June 9th). They will suggest that the Justice Department is bending to the political whims of the NRA by striking down a rule implemented in the last days of the Reno administration relating to the retention of records for Brady background checks. DOJ is currently "conducting a comprehensive review" of the program and may make substantial changes to it following that review.
- 48 Hours/CBS may be breaking a story based out of Seattle that alleges that the FBI failed to disclose documents in the case of US v. Nickell (No. CR87-276WD, W.D. Washington). Nickell was convicted in 1987 for murdering her husband and is serving a life sentence. All appeals have expired.
- USA Today is working on a story about settlement talks that are underway between the United States and the National Ass'n. of Homebuilders. The NAHB filed suit over federal wetlands protection regulations.
- Wall Street Journal is working on story about a legal challenge to environmental regulation of coal mining in WV, and the relationship of mining to energy supply issues.
- NBC Nightly News is doing a piece on border smuggling that will air on Saturday, June 9th.
- WA Post is working on a comprehensive story on Prince George's County police misconduct and the lack of prosecution by the United States Attorney's Office in Maryland. The story will run the week of June 11th or 18th.

III. Attorney General's Schedule

June 8 - 10. (Springfield, MO) AG personal residence.

June 12. Attend National Center for Neighborhood Enterprise Event.

June 13. Attend Justice Management Division Awards Ceremony.

I guess I have no objection to a letter. Although we told Hyde's staff we'd submit written testimony, I'm not sure that they'll be upset if we do not submit it in that form. Bigger issue, however, is that WH Counsel did sign off on my testifying citing the precedent of my predecessor having done so and the fact that I am not a commissioned officer.

All --

At Viet Dinh's request, I am writing to propose that we hold the first meeting of the confirmation working group on Monday, June 11 at 4:00 pm.
The meeting will be at DOJ in room 4627 (Associate AG's conference room).

Please let me know if this time does not work for you. Also, please let us know if we have inadvertently omitted anyone from this list who should be invited to the meeting.

Subject: Schedule

Helgi and I just discussed the schedule for the third slate again, and we are both strongly in favor of leaving the schedule the way it is, i.e., sending all the nominations up the week of June 18-22. Adding even one or two more days of nominations will make the process even more complicated than it already is, and we risk provoking Leahy by giving him inadequate notice.

We would like to meet tuesday to discuss message and strategy on judicial nominees and to update you on some of what we have learned how Democrats may proceed. This will be a short meeting, no longer than 1 hour and will be at 2:30 pm in S. Dirksen 240. I know this is short notice, but given the turn of events, it would be good to do this sooner than later. If you can not make it,
please let me know via email. Thanks. Makan

Johnny Sutton advises me that, other than Garza, none of the other inmates on federal death row have scheduled execution dates. There are no other dates because these inmates have not exhausted their appellate and habeas rights. Johnny said that he does not expect any other executions to be scheduled for this year.

Although I emphatically agree with the general message, especially the last two lines, of the Dorothea Day version, I have to stick with my position that Henley has the upper hand in cadence and pictorial and evocative force.

Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the Pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance,
I have not winced nor cried aloud:
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody, but unbowed.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of fate:

REV_00127448

I am the captain of my soul.

William Ernest Henley

My Captain

Out of the light that dazzles me,
Bright as the sun from pole to pole,
I Thank the God I know to be
For Christ the conqueror of my soul.

Since His the sway of circumstance,
I would not wince nor cry aloud.
Under that rule which men call chance
My head with joy is humbly bowed.

Beyond this place of sin and tears
That life with Him! And His the aid,
Despite the menace of the years,
Keeps, and shall keep me, unafraid.

I have no fear, though strait the gate,
He cleared the punishment from the scroll.
Christ is the Master of my fate,
Christ is the Captain of my soul.

Although I emphatically agree with the general message, especially the last two lines, of the Dorothea Day version, I have to stick with my position that Henley has the upper hand in cadence and pictorial and evocative force.

INVICTUS

Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the Pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance,
I have not winced nor cried aloud:
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody, but unbowed.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of fate:
I am the captain of my soul.

William Ernest Henley
1849-1903

My Captain

Out of the light that dazzles me,
Bright as the sun from pole to pole,
I Thank the God I know to be
For Christ the conqueror of my soul.

Since His the sway of circumstance,
I would not wince nor cry aloud.
Under that rule which men call chance
My head with joy is humbly bowed.

Beyond this place of sin and tears
That life with Him! And His the aid,
Despite the menace of the years,
Keeps, and shall keep me, unafraid.

I have no fear, though strait the gate,
He cleared the punishment from the scroll.
Christ is the Master of my fate,
Christ is the Captain of my soul.

Megan:

Although the Vice President is one of the speakers at the St. Louis Regional Chamber Event this morning in Room 450 of the Old EOB, it is a White House event. Thus, you should refer Mr. Carlo of the White House staff to the Office of Counsel to the President for legal advice on how to properly structure the event. He should immediately contact Brett Kavanaugh (x6-7984), who is that Office's expert on "political vs. official" issues.

In general, I have been using Phil Perry (in the Deputy AG's office) as my point of contact, as Phil covers the Civil Division. However, I have also had direct contact with Alex Acosta and Paul Clement on a case-by-case basis. The standard format, moreover, is for them to advise of the course of action they intend to undertake on a particular matter, and for us to in essence say nothing if we agree with that proposed course of action.

Who are the principal points of contact we have been using when we have discussions between our office and DOJ on litigation-related issues? Is there a central intake point at DOJ or do we speak with individual offices? What are the sensitivities that we need to keep in mind as we try to design a better system for information flow? I'd appreciate your advice on any of these questions.

STATEMENT OF
DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
BEFORE THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON SELECT REVENUE MEASURES COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Mr Chairman, Mr. McNulty, and Members of the Subcommittee:

The Office of Tax Policy appreciates the opportunity to present testimony on tax incentives to increase domestic production of oil and gas and promote energy conservation. There has been renewed interest in the role of tax incentives in our national energy policy.

The fundamental principle underlying a sound energy policy is that markets should be allowed to function freely and market interventions should be avoided unless justified by compelling energy security, economic, environmental, or other concerns. For example, returns on investments that increase domestic oil and gas reserves may not reflect the contribution of those investments to ensuring stability in supply and thereby reducing our vulnerability to oil supply disruptions. It is the goal of this Administration to pursue an energy policy that protects America=s economic, security, and environmental interests.

Beyond the fundamental issue of whether a tax incentive is justified at all, a number of other, often contradictory, considerations must be taken into account in the design of any particular incentive. For example, incentives should be appropriately targeted to induce desired activities in a cost-effective manner. Thus, incentives should be designed to not reward investments that would have been made in the absence of an incentive. At the same time, however, incentives that are targeted too narrowly may reduce the cost of only some technologies and discourage investment in other promising approaches. This can result in economic inefficiency and will contribute to perceptions that the tax system is being used inappropriately to pick winners and losers among competing technologies.

In addition, incentives should also be designed to minimize complexity and avoid unnecessary increases in taxpayer compliance burdens and IRS administrative costs.

Increasing Domestic Oil and Gas Production

Before turning to a discussion of the present tax treatment of oil and gas activities, we would like to provide a brief overview of this sector.

Overview

business credit generally may be carried back one taxable year and carried forward 20 taxable years.

The enhanced oil recovery credit for a taxable year is equal to 15 percent of certain costs attributable to qualified enhanced oil recovery (AEOR \cong) projects undertaken by the taxpayer in the United States during the taxable year. To the extent that a credit is allowed for such costs, the taxpayer must reduce the amount otherwise deductible or required to be capitalized and recovered through depreciation, depletion, or amortization, as appropriate, with respect to the costs. A taxpayer may elect not to have the enhanced oil recovery credit apply for a taxable year.

For purposes of the credit, qualified enhanced oil recovery costs include the following costs which are paid or incurred with respect to a qualified EOR project: (1) the cost of tangible property which is an integral part of the project and with respect to which depreciation or amortization is allowable; (2) IDCs that the taxpayer may elect to deduct;¹⁷ and (3) the cost of tertiary injectants with respect to which a deduction is allowable, whether or not chargeable to capital account.

A qualified EOR project means any project that is located within the United States and involves the application (in accordance with sound engineering principles) of one or more qualifying tertiary recovery methods which can reasonably be expected to result in more than an insignificant increase in the amount of crude oil which ultimately will be recovered. The qualifying tertiary recovery methods generally include the following nine methods: miscible fluid displacement, steam-drive injection, microemulsion flooding, in situ combustion, polymer-augmented water flooding, cyclic-steam injection, alkaline flooding, carbonated water flooding, and immiscible non-hydrocarbon gas displacement, or any other method approved by the IRS. In addition, for purposes of the enhanced oil recovery credit, immiscible non-hydrocarbon gas displacement generally is considered a qualifying tertiary recovery method, even if the gas injected is not carbon dioxide.

A project is not considered a qualified EOR project unless the project's operator submits to the IRS a certification from a petroleum engineer that the project meets the requirements set ¹⁶ The average per-barrel price of crude oil for this purpose is determined in the same manner as for purposes of the section 29 credit.

The enhanced oil recovery credit is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1990, with respect to costs paid or incurred in EOR projects begun or significantly expanded after that date.

Conventional oil recovery methods do not recover all of a well=s oil. Some of the remaining oil can be extracted by unconventional methods, but these methods are generally more costly. At current world oil prices, a large part of the remaining oil in place is uneconomic to recover by unconventional methods. In this environment, the EOR credit can increase recoverable reserves. Although recovering oil using EOR methods is more expensive than recovering it using conventional methods, it may be less expensive than producing oil from new reservoirs. Although the credit could phase out at higher oil prices, it is fully effective at present world oil prices.

Alternative minimum tax

A taxpayer is subject to an alternative minimum tax (AAMT \cong) to the extent that its tentative minimum tax exceeds its regular income tax liability. A corporate taxpayer=s tentative minimum tax generally equals 20 percent of its alternative minimum taxable income in excess of an exemption amount. (The marginal AMT rate for a noncorporate taxpayer is 26 or 28 percent, depending on the amount of its alternative minimum taxable income above an exemption amount.)

Alternative minimum taxable income (AAMTI \cong) is the taxpayer=s taxable income increased by certain tax preferences and adjusted by determining the tax treatment of certain items in a manner which negates the deferral of income resulting from the regular tax treatment of those items.

As a general rule, percentage depletion deductions claimed in excess of the basis of the depletable property constitute an item of tax preference in determining the AMT. In addition, the AMTI of a corporation is increased by an amount equal to 75 percent of the amount by which adjusted current earnings (ACE \cong) of the corporation exceed AMTI (as determined before this adjustment). In general, ACE means AMTI with additional adjustments that generally follow the rules presently applicable to corporations in computing their earnings and profits. As a general rule a corporation must use the cost depletion method in computing its ACE adjustment. Thus, the difference between a corporation=s percentage depletion deduction (if any) claimed for regular tax purposes and its allowable deduction determined under the cost depletion method is factored into its overall ACE adjustment.

Excess percentage depletion deductions related to crude oil and natural gas production are not items of tax preference for AMT purposes. In addition, corporations that are independent oil and gas producers and royalty owners may determine depletion deductions using the percentage depletion method in computing their ACE adjustments.

The difference between the amount of a taxpayer's IDC deductions and the amount which would have been currently deductible had IDCs been capitalized and recovered over a 10-year period may constitute an item of tax preference for the AMT to the extent that this amount exceeds 65 percent of the taxpayer's net income from oil and gas properties for the taxable year (the Aexcess IDC preference). In addition, for purposes of computing a corporation's ACE adjustment to the AMT, IDCs are capitalized and amortized over the 60-month period beginning with the month in which they are paid or incurred. The preference does not apply if the taxpayer elects to capitalize and amortize IDCs over a 60-month period for regular tax purposes.

IDCs related to oil and gas wells are generally not taken into account in computing the excess IDC preference of taxpayers that are not integrated oil companies. This treatment does not apply, however, to the extent it would reduce the amount of the taxpayer's AMTI by more than 40 percent of the amount that the taxpayer's AMTI would have been if those IDCs had been taken into account.

In addition, for corporations other than integrated oil companies, there is no ACE adjustment for IDCs with respect to oil and gas wells. That is, such a taxpayer is permitted to use its regular tax method of writing off those IDCs for purposes of computing its adjusted current earnings.

Absent these rules, the incentive effect of the special provisions for oil and gas would be reduced for firms subject to the AMT. These rules, however, effectively eliminate AMT concerns for independent producers.

Passive activity loss and credit rules

A taxpayer's deductions from passive trade or business activities, to the extent they exceed income from all such passive activities of the taxpayer (exclusive of portfolio income), generally may not be deducted against other income.¹⁸ Thus, for example, an individual taxpayer may not deduct losses from a passive activity against income from wages. Losses suspended under this Apassive activity loss limitation are carried forward and treated as deductions from passive activities in the following year, and thus may offset any income from passive activities generated in that later year. Losses from a passive activity may be deducted in full when the taxpayer disposes of its entire interest in that activity to an unrelated party in a transaction in which all realized gain or loss is recognized.

An activity generally is treated as passive if the taxpayer does not materially participate in it. A taxpayer is treated as materially participating in an activity only if the taxpayer is involved in

A working interest in an oil or gas property generally is not treated as a passive activity, whether or not the taxpayer materially participates in the activities related to that property. This exception from the passive activity rules does not apply if the taxpayer holds the working interest through an entity which limits the liability of the taxpayer with respect to the interest. In addition, if a taxpayer has any loss for any taxable year from a working interest in an oil or gas property which is treated pursuant to this working interest exception as a loss which is not from a passive activity, then any net income from such property (or any property the basis of which is determined in whole or in part by reference to the basis of such property) for any succeeding taxable year is treated as income of the taxpayer which is not from a passive activity.

Similar limitations apply to the utilization of tax credits attributable to passive activities. Thus, for example, the passive activity rules (and, consequently, the oil and gas working interest exception to those rules) apply to the nonconventional fuels production credit and the enhanced oil recovery credit. However, if a taxpayer has net income from a working interest in an oil and gas property which is treated as not arising from a passive activity, then any tax credits attributable to the interest in that property would be treated as credits not from a passive activity (and, thus, not subject to the passive activity credit limitation) to the extent that the amount of the credits does not exceed the regular tax liability which is allocable to such net income.

As a result of this exception from the passive loss limitations, owners of working interests in oil and gas properties may use losses from such interests to offset income from other sources.

Tertiary injectants

Taxpayers are allowed to deduct the cost of qualified tertiary injectant expenses for the taxable year. Qualified tertiary injectant expenses are amounts paid or incurred for any tertiary injectant (other than recoverable hydrocarbon injectants) which is used as a part of a tertiary recovery method.

The provision allowing the deduction for qualified tertiary injectant expenses resolves a disagreement between taxpayers (who considered such costs to be IDCs or operating expenses) and the IRS (which considered such costs to be subject to capitalization).

Energy Efficiency and Alternative Energy Sources

Incentives for energy efficiency and alternative energy sources are also essential elements of national energy policy. The continuing strength of our economy over the past two years, despite oil price rises, underscores the dramatic improvements in energy efficiency we have achieved over the past quarter century, as well as the changing economy. While past oil shortages have taken a significant toll on the U.S. economy, the recent increases in oil prices have not affected the economy much. Increased energy efficiency in cars, homes, and manufacturing has helped insulate the economy from these short-term market fluctuations. In 1974, we consumed 15 barrels of oil for every $10,000 of gross domestic product. Today we consume only 8 barrels of oil for the same amount (in constant dollars) of economic output.

Current law tax incentives for energy efficiency and alternative fuels

Tax incentives currently provide an important element of support for energy-efficiency improvements and increased use of renewable and alternative fuels. Current incentives in the form of tax expenditures are estimated to total $1.2 billion for fiscal years 2002 through 2006. They include a tax credit for electric vehicles and expensing for clean-fuel vehicles ($20 million), a tax credit for the production of electricity from wind or biomass and a tax credit for certain solar energy property ($590 million), and an exclusion from gross income for certain energy conservation subsidies provided by public utilities to their customers ($580 million).¹⁹

Electric and clean-fuel vehicles and clean-fuel vehicle refueling property

A 10-percent tax credit is provided for the cost of a qualified electric vehicle, up to a maximum credit of $4,000. A qualified electric vehicle is a motor vehicle that is powered primarily by an electric motor drawing current from rechargeable batteries, fuel cells, or other portable sources of electric current, the original use of which commences with the taxpayer, and that is acquired for use by the taxpayer and not for resale. The full amount of the credit is available for purchases prior to 2002. The credit begins to phase down in 2002 and does not apply to vehicles placed in service after 2004.

Certain costs of qualified clean-fuel vehicles and clean-fuel vehicle refueling property may be deducted when such property is placed in service. Qualified electric vehicles do not qualify for the clean-fuel vehicle deduction. The deduction begins to phase down in 2002 and does not apply to property placed in service after 2004.

Energy from wind or biomass

A 1.5-cent-per-kilowatt-hour tax credit is provided for electricity produced from wind, Aclosed-loop≡ biomass (organic material from a plant that is planted exclusively for purposes of being used at a qualified facility to produce electricity), and poultry waste. The electricity must be sold to an unrelated person and the credit is limited to the first 10 years of production. The credit applies only to facilities placed in service before January 1, 2002. The credit amount is indexed for inflation after 1992.

¹⁹ Analytical Perspectives, Budget of the United States Government, Fiscal Year 2002, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC, 2001, p. 63.

Solar energy

A 10-percent investment tax credit is provided to businesses for qualifying equipment that uses solar energy to generate electricity, to heat or cool or provide hot water for use in a structure, or to provide solar process heat.

Ethanol and renewable source methanol

An income tax credit and an excise tax exemption are provided for ethanol and renewable source methanol used as a fuel. In general, the income tax credit is 53 cents per gallon for ethanol and 60 cents per gallon for renewable source methanol. As an alternative to the income tax credit, gasohol blenders may claim an equivalent gasoline tax exemption for each ethanol and renewable source methanol that is blended into qualifying gasohol.

The income tax credit expires on December 31, 2007, and the excise tax exemption expires on September 30, 2007. In addition, the ethanol credit and exemption are each reduced by 1 cent per gallon in 2003 and by an additional 1 cent per gallon in 2005. Neither the credit nor the exemption apply during any period in which motor fuel taxes dedicated to the Highway Trust Fund are limited to 4.3 cents per gallon. Under current law, the motor fuel tax dedicated to the Highway Trust Fund will be limited to 4.3 cents per gallon beginning on October 1, 2005.

Energy conservation subsidies

Subsidies provided by public utilities to their customers for the purchase or installation of energy conservation measures are excluded from the customers' gross income. An energy conservation measure is any installation or modification primarily designed to reduce consumption of electricity or natural gas or to improve the management of energy demand with respect to a dwelling unit.

Administration budget proposals

The Administration's budget proposals for fiscal year 2002 include tax incentives for renewable energy resources. The budget also contains proposals to modify the tax treatment of nuclear decommissioning funds related to electricity production and to extend the suspension of the net income limitation applicable to certain oil and gas production. The Administration's proposals are described below.²⁰

Electricity from wind and biomass

²⁰ For a more detailed description, see General Explanations of the Administration's Fiscal Year 2002 Tax Relief Proposals, Department of the Treasury, April 2001.

The Administration proposes to extend the credit for electricity produced from wind and biomass for three years to facilities placed in service before January 1, 2005. In addition, eligible biomass sources would be expanded to include certain biomass from forest-related resources, agricultural sources, and other specified sources. Special rules would apply to biomass facilities placed in service before January 1, 2002. Electricity produced at such facilities from newly eligible sources would be eligible for the credit only from January 1, 2002, through December 31, 2004. The credit for such electricity would be computed at a rate equal to 60 percent of the generally applicable rate. Electricity produced from newly eligible biomass co-fired in coal plants would also be eligible for the credit only from January 1, 2002, through December 31, 2004. The credit for such electricity would be computed at a rate equal to 30 percent of the generally applicable rate.

Residential solar energy systems

The Administration proposes a new tax credit for individuals that purchase solar energy equipment used to generate electricity (photovoltaic equipment) or heat water (solar water heating equipment) for use in a dwelling unit that the individual uses as a residence. The credit would be available only for equipment used exclusively for purposes other than heating swimming pools. The proposed credit would be equal to 15 percent of the cost of the equipment and its installation. The credit would be nonrefundable and an individual would be allowed a lifetime maximum credit of $2,000 per residence for photovoltaic equipment and $2,000 per residence for solar water heating equipment. The credit would apply only to solar water heating equipment placed in service after December 31, 2001, and before January 1, 2006, and to photovoltaic systems placed in service after December 31, 2001, and before January 1, 2008.

Nuclear decommissioning funds

The Administration proposes to repeal the current law provision that limits deductible contributions to a nuclear decommissioning fund to the amount included in the taxpayer=s cost of service for ratemaking purposes. Thus, unregulated taxpayers would be allowed a deduction for amounts contributed to a qualified nuclear decommissioning fund. The Administration also proposes to permit funding of all decommissioning costs (including pre-1984 costs) through qualified nuclear decommissioning funds. Contributions to fund pre-1984 costs would be deductible except to the extent a deduction (other than under the qualified fund rules) or an exclusion from income has been previously allowed with respect to those costs. The Administration=s proposal would clarify that any transfer of a qualified nuclear decommissioning fund in connection with the transfer of the power plant with which it is associated would be nontaxable and no gain or loss will be recognized by the transferor or transferee as a result of the transfer. In addition, the proposal would permit taxpayers to make deductible contributions to a qualified fund after the end of the nuclear power plant=s estimated useful life and would provide that nuclear decommissioning costs are deductible when paid.

Net income limitation on percentage depletion from marginal wells

The Administration proposes a one-year extension of the provision suspending the 100-percent-of-net-income limitation for marginal oil and gas wells. Under the Administration proposal, marginal wells would continue to be exempt from the limitation during taxable years beginning in 2002.

NEPD Group proposals

The Report of the National Energy Policy Development (NEPD) Group issued in May also included tax incentives for renewable energy resources and for more efficient energy use. The NEPD Group proposals are described below.²¹

Fuel from landfill methane

The NEPD Group proposes to extend the section 29 credit for fuel produced from landfill methane produced at a facility (or portion of a facility) that is placed in service after December 31, 2001. Fuel produced at such facilities would be eligible for the credit through December 31, 2010. The proposal would also expand the credit by permitting the credit for fuel used by the taxpayer to produce electricity. The credit for fuel produced at landfills subject to EPA's 1996 New Source Performance Standards/Emissions Guidelines would be limited to two-thirds of the otherwise applicable amount. In the case of landfills with facilities that currently qualify for the section 29 credit, this limitation would not apply until after 2007.

Ethanol and renewable source methanol

The NEPD Group proposes to extend the income tax credit and excise tax exemption for ethanol and renewable source methanol through December 31, 2010. The current law rule providing that neither the credit nor the exemption apply during any period in which motor fuel taxes dedicated to the Highway Trust Fund are limited to 4.3 cents per gallon would be retained.

Hybrid and fuel cell vehicles

The NEPD Group proposes to provide temporary tax credits for certain hybrid and fuel cell vehicles.

A credit of $250 to $4,000 would be available for purchases of qualifying hybrid vehicles after December 31, 2001, and before January 1, 2008. A hybrid vehicle is a vehicle that draws propulsion from both an on-board internal combustion or heat engine using combustible fuel and an on-board rechargeable energy storage system. To qualify for the minimum credit, a hybrid vehicle would be required to derive at least 5 percent of its maximum available power from the rechargeable energy storage system. Larger credits would be available for vehicles that derive larger percentages of power from the rechargeable energy storage system and for vehicles that meet specified fuel economy standards.

A credit of $1,000 to $8,000 would be available for the purchase of qualifying fuel cell vehicles after December 31, 2001, and before January 1, 2008. A fuel cell vehicle is a motor vehicle propelled by power derived from one or more cells that convert chemical energy directly into electricity by combining oxygen with on-board hydrogen (including hydrogen produced from on-board fuel that requires reformation before use). To qualify for the minimum credit, a fuel cell vehicle would be required to meet a minimum fuel economy standard for its weight class. Larger credits would be available for vehicles that achieve higher fuel economy standards.

Combined heat and power systems

To encourage more efficient energy usage, the NEPD Group proposes to provide a 10-percent investment credit for qualifying combined heat and power (CHP) systems. CHP systems are used to produce electricity (and/or mechanical power) and usable heat from the same primary energy source. To qualify for the credit, a system would be required to produce at least 20 percent of its total useful energy in the form of thermal energy and at least 20 percent in the form of electrical and/or mechanical power and would also be required to satisfy an energy efficiency standard. The credit would apply to CHP equipment placed in service after December 31, 2001, and before January 1, 2007.

This concludes our testimony. We would be pleased to answer any questions the Subcommittee may have.

Extend and Modify Credit for Fuel Produced from Landfill Methane

Current Law

Taxpayers that produce gas from biomass (including landfill methane) are eligible for a tax credit (the section 29 credit) equal to $3 per barrel-of-oil equivalent. For this purpose, a barrel-of-oil equivalent is the amount of gas that has a Btu (British thermal unit) content of 5.8 million. To qualify for the credit, the gas must be produced domestically from a facility placed in service by the taxpayer before July 1, 1998, pursuant to a written binding contract in effect before January 1, 1997. In addition, the gas must be sold to an unrelated person before January 1, 2008.

The amount of the section 29 credit generally is adjusted by an inflation adjustment factor for the calendar year in which the sale occurs. The inflation adjustment factor for the 2000 taxable year was 2.0454, and the inflation-adjusted amount of the credit for that year was $6.14 per barrel or barrel equivalent. The credit begins to phase out if the annual average unregulated wellhead price per barrel of domestic crude oil exceeds $23.50 multiplied by the inflation adjustment factor. For 2000, the inflation adjusted threshold for onset of the phaseout was $48.07 ($23.50 x 2.0454) and the average wellhead price for that year was $26.73.

The amount of the section 29 credit allowable with respect to a project is reduced by any unrecaptured business energy tax credit or enhanced oil recovery credit claimed with respect to such project.

The section 29 credit may not be used to offset alternative minimum tax liability. Any unused section 29 credit generally may not be carried back or forward to another taxable year; however, a taxpayer receives a credit for prior year minimum tax liability to the extent that a section 29 credit is disallowed as a result of the operation of the alternative minimum tax. The credit is limited to what would have been the regular tax liability but for the alternative minimum tax.

Reasons for Change

The tax credit helps make fuel produced from landfill methane competitive with other fuels. Extending the credit would continue the important contribution of this renewable energy source to the Nation's long-term energy supply.

Proposal

The credit would be allowed for fuel produced from landfill methane if the fuel is produced from a facility (or portion of a facility) placed in service after December 31, 2001, and before January 1, 2011, and is sold (or used to produce electricity that is sold) before January 1,

Oil is an internationally traded commodity with its domestic price set by world supply and demand. Domestic exploration and production activity is affected by the world price of crude oil. Historically, world oil prices have fluctuated substantially. From 1970 to the early 1980s, there was a fivefold increase in real oil prices. World oil prices fell sharply in 1986 and were relatively more stable from 1986 through 1997. During that period, average refiner acquisition costs ranged from $14.91 to $23.59 in real 1992 dollars. In 1998, however, oil costs to the refiner declined to $12.52 per barrel in nominal dollars ($11.14 per barrel in 1992 dollars), their lowest level in 25 years in real terms. Since 1998, the decline has reversed with refiner acquisition costs (in nominal dollars) rising to $17.51 per barrel in 1999 and $27.69 per barrel in 2000 (the price has since dropped to $24.11 per barrel in March 2001, the latest month for which composite figures are available). The equivalent prices in 1992 dollars are $15.31 per barrel in 1999, $24.28 per barrel in 2000, and $20.39 per barrel in March 2001.

Domestic oil production has been on the decline since the mid-1980s. From 1978 to 1983 oil consumption in the United States also declined, but increasing consumption since 1983 has more than offset this decline. In 2000, domestic oil consumption was 28 percent higher than in 1970. The decline in oil production and increase in consumption have led to an increase in oil imports. Net petroleum (crude and product) imports have risen from approximately 38 percent of consumption in 1988 to 52 percent in 2000.

A similar pattern of large recent price increases and increasing dependence on imports has occurred in the natural gas market. During the second half of the 1990s, spot prices for natural gas exceeded $4.00 per million Btu (MMBtu) in only one month (February 1996). The spot price again exceeded $4.00 per MMBtu in May 2000, rose above $5.00 per MMBtu in September 2000, and exceeded $10.00 per MMBtu for several days last winter. The current spot price is approximately $3.71 per MMBtu.¹

The United States has large natural gas reserves and was essentially self-sufficient in natural gas until the late 1980s. Since 1986, natural gas consumption has increased by more than 30 percent but natural gas production has increased by only 17 percent. Net imports as a share of consumption nearly quadrupled from 1986 to 2000, rising from 4.2 percent to 15.6 percent. Natural gas from Canada makes up nearly all of the imports into the United States.

Current law tax incentives for oil and gas production

The importance of maintaining a strong domestic energy industry has been long recognized and the Internal Revenue Code includes a variety of measures to stimulate domestic exploration and production. They are generally justified on the ground that they reduce vulnerability to an oil supply disruption through increases in domestic production, reserves, 2011. The credit for fuel produced at landfills subject to EPA's 1996 New Source Performance Standards/Emissions Guidelines would be limited to two-thirds of the otherwise applicable amount beginning on January 1, 2008, if any portion of the facility for producing fuel at the landfill was placed in service before July 1, 1998, and on January 1, 2002, in all other cases. The proposal would clarify, for purposes of determining the extent to which a facility is placed in service after December 31, 2001, that the facility includes the wells, pipes, and related components used to collect landfill methane and that only production attributable to wells, pipes, and related components placed in service after December 31, 2001, is treated as produced from the portion of the facility placed in service after that date.

Extension of Tax Incentives for Ethanol

Current Law

Current law provides an income tax credit and an excise tax exemption for ethanol and renewable source methanol used as a fuel. In general, the income tax credit for ethanol is 53 cents per gallon, but small ethanol producers (i.e., those producing less than 30 million gallons of ethanol per year) qualify for a credit of 63 cents per gallon on the first 15 million gallons of ethanol produced in a year. A credit of 60 cents per gallon is allowed for renewable source methanol.

As an alternative to the income tax credit, gasoline blenders may claim a gasoline tax exemption of 53 cents for each gallon of ethanol and 60 cents for each gallon of renewable source methanol that is blended into qualifying gasoline.

The income tax credit expires on December 31, 2007, and the excise tax exemption expires on September 30, 2007. In addition, the ethanol credit and exemption are each reduced by 1 cent per gallon in 2003 and by an additional 1 cent per gallon in 2005. Neither the credit nor the exemption apply during any period in which motor fuel taxes dedicated to the Highway Trust Fund are limited to 4.3 cents per gallon. Under current law, the motor fuel tax dedicated to the Highway Trust Fund will be limited to 4.3 cents per gallon beginning on October 1, 2005.

Reasons for Change

The tax credit and excise tax exemption help make ethanol and renewable source methanol competitive with other fuels. Extending the credit and exemption at their current levels would continue the important contribution of these renewable energy sources to the Nation's long-term energy supply.

Proposal

The income tax credit and the excise tax exemption would be extended through December 31, 2010. The current law rule providing that neither the credit nor the exemption apply during any period in which motor fuel taxes dedicated to the Highway Trust Fund are limited to 4.3 cents per gallon would be retained.

Provide Tax Credit for Certain Hybrid and Fuel Cell Vehicles

Current Law

No generally available income tax credit for purchases of hybrid vehicles is available currently. A 10-percent tax credit is provided for the cost of a qualified electric vehicle, up to a maximum credit of $4,000. A qualified electric vehicle is a motor vehicle that is powered primarily by an electric motor drawing current from rechargeable batteries, fuel cells, or other portable sources of electric current, the original use of which commences with the taxpayer, and that is acquired for use by the taxpayer and not for resale. The full amount of the credit is available for purchases prior to 2002. The credit begins to phase down in 2002 and does not apply to vehicles placed in service after 2004.

Certain costs of qualified clean-fuel property, including clean-fuel vehicles, may be deducted when such property is placed in service. Qualified electric vehicles do not qualify for the clean-fuel vehicle deduction. The deduction begins to phase down in 2002 and does not apply to property placed in service after 2004.

Reasons for Change

The transportation sector now accounts for 67 percent of US oil consumption. Cars, sport utility vehicles, light trucks and minivans alone account for 40 percent of US oil consumption, about 20 to 40 percent of all urban smog-forming emissions and 20 percent of greenhouse gas emissions. Almost all of these vehicles use a single gasoline-fueled engine.

Hybrid vehicles, which have more than one source of power on board the vehicle, and electric vehicles have the potential to reduce petroleum consumption, air pollution and greenhouse gas emissions. The proposed credits will encourage the purchase of highly fuel efficient vehicles that incorporate advanced automotive technologies and will help to move hybrid and fuel cell vehicles from the laboratory to the highway. These vehicles can significantly reduce oil consumption, emissions of air pollutants and carbon dioxide, the most prevalent greenhouse gas.

Proposal

The proposal would provide temporary tax credits for certain hybrid and fuel cell vehicles:

(1) Credit for qualified hybrid vehicles. A credit, of up to $4,000, would be available for purchases of qualified hybrid vehicles after December 31, 2001, and before January 1, 2008. The credit would be:

- (a) $250 if the rechargeable energy storage system provides at least 5 percent but less than 10 percent of the maximum available power;
- (b) $500 if the rechargeable energy storage system provides at least 10 percent and less than 20 percent of the maximum available power;
- (c) $750 if the rechargeable energy storage system provides at least 20 percent and less than 30 percent of the maximum available power; and
- (d) $1,000 if the rechargeable energy storage system provides 30 percent or more of the maximum available power.

If the vehicle's fuel economy exceeds the 2000 model year city fuel economy, the amount of credit shown in (a) through (d) above would be increased by the following amounts:

- (i) $500 if the vehicle achieves at least 125 percent but less than 150 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy;
- (ii) $1,000 if the vehicle achieves at least 150 percent but less than 175 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy;
- (iii) $1,500 if the vehicle achieves at least 175 percent but less than 200 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy;
- (iv) $2,000 if the vehicle achieves at least 200 percent but less than 225 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy;
- (v) $2,500 if the vehicle achieves at least 225 percent but less than 250 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy; and
- (vi) $3,000 if the vehicle achieves at least 250 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy.

(2) Credit for qualified fuel cell vehicles. A credit of up to $8,000 would be available for the purchase of new qualified fuel cell vehicles after December 31, 2001 and before January 1, 2008. The credit would be $4,000, but, if the vehicle's fuel economy exceeds the 2000 model year city fuel economy, the credit would increase by the following amounts:

- (i) $1,000 if the vehicle achieves at least 150 percent but less than 175 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy;
- (ii) $1,500 if the vehicle achieves at least 175 percent but less than 200 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy;
- (iii) $2,000 if the vehicle achieves at least 200 percent but less than 225 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy;
- (iv) $2,500 if the vehicle achieves at least 225 percent but less than 250 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy;
- (v) $3,000 if the vehicle achieves at least 250 percent but less than 275 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy;
- (vi) $3,500 if the vehicle achieves at least 275 percent but less than 300 percent of the

- 2000 model year city fuel economy; and
- (vii) $4,000 if the vehicle achieves at least 300 percent of the 2000 model year city fuel economy.

The 2000 model year city fuel economy would be the following:

If the vehicle inertia weight class is:	The 2000 model year city fuel economy is:
	For a passenger automobile:	For a light truck:
1,500 or 1,750 lbs	43.7 mpg	37.6 mpg
2,000 lbs	38.3 mpg	33.7 mpg
2,250 lbs	34.1 mpg	30.6 mpg
2,500 lbs	30.7 mpg	28.0 mpg
2,750 lbs	27.9 mpg	25.9 mpg
3,000 lbs	25.6 mpg	24.1 mpg
3,500 lbs	22.0 mpg	21.3 mpg
4,000 lbs	19.3 mpg	19.0 mpg
4,500 lbs	17.2 mpg	17.3 mpg
5,000 lbs	15.5 mpg	15.8 mpg
5,500 lbs	14.1 mpg	14.6 mpg
6,000 lbs	12.9 mpg	13.6 mpg
6,500 lbs	11.9 mpg	12.8 mpg
7,000 or 8,500 lbs	11.1 mpg	12.0 mpg

The Avehicle inertia weight class≡ is defined in regulations prescribed by the Environmental Protection Agency for purposes of title II of the Clean Air Act.

A qualifying hybrid vehicle is a motor vehicle that draws propulsion energy from on-board sources of stored energy which are both: (1) an internal combustion engine or heat engine using combustible fuel, and (2) a rechargeable energy storage system. A qualifying fuel cell vehicle is a motor vehicle that is propelled by power derived from one or more cells which convert chemical energy directly into electricity by combining oxygen with hydrogen fuel which is stored on board the vehicle and may or may not require reformation prior to use. A qualifying vehicle must meet all applicable regulatory requirements.

Maximum available power means the maximum value available from the battery or other energy storage device, during a standard power test, divided by the sum of the battery or other energy storage device and the SAE net power of the heat engine.

These credits would be available for all qualifying light vehicles including cars, minivans, sport utility vehicles, and light trucks. Taxpayers would be able to claim only one of the credits for one vehicle and taxpayers who claim either credit would not be able to claim the qualified electric vehicle credit or the deduction for clean-fuel vehicle property for the same vehicle. Business taxpayers claiming either credit would be subject to the limitations on the general business credit and would be required to reduce the basis of the vehicle by the amount of the credit.

Investment Credit for Combined Heat and Power (CHP) Systems

Current law

Combined heat and power (CHP) systems are used to produce electricity (and/or mechanical power) and usable thermal energy from a single primary energy source. Depreciation allowances for CHP property vary by asset use and capacity. Assets employed in the production of electricity used by the taxpayer in an industrial manufacturing process or plant activity (and not ordinarily available for sale to others) have a general cost recovery period of 15 years if rated with total capacity in excess of 500 kilowatts. Electricity production assets of lesser-rated capacity generally are classified with other manufacturing assets and have cost recovery periods of five to ten years. Assets used in the production of electricity for sale have either a 15-year or 20-year recovery period. For assets that are structural components of buildings, however, the recovery period is either 39 years (if nonresidential) or 27.5 years (if residential), and the straight-line method for computing depreciation allowances must be used. For assets with recovery periods of 10 years or less, the 200 percent declining balance method may be used to compute depreciation allowances. The 150 percent declining balance method may be used for assets with recovery periods of 15 or 20 years. No income tax credit is provided currently for investment in combined heat and power property.

Reasons for change

{tc \11 "Reasons for change}

Combined heat and power systems utilize thermal energy that is otherwise wasted in producing electricity by more conventional methods. CHP systems achieve a greater level of overall energy efficiency, and thereby lessen the consumption of primary fossil fuels, lower total energy costs, and reduce carbon emissions. An investment tax credit for CHP assets is expected to encourage increased energy efficiency by accelerating planned investments and inducing additional investments in such systems. The increased demand for CHP equipment should, in turn, reduce CHP production costs and spur additional technological innovation in improved CHP systems.

Proposal

The proposal would establish a 10-percent investment credit for qualified CHP systems with an electrical capacity in excess of 50 kilowatts or with a capacity to produce mechanical power in excess of 67 horsepower (or an equivalent combination of electrical and mechanical energy capacities). CHP property would be defined as property comprising a system that uses the same energy source for the simultaneous or sequential generation of (1) electricity or mechanical shaft power (or both) and (2) steam or other forms of useful thermal energy (including heating and cooling applications). A qualified CHP system would be required to produce at least 20 percent of its total useful energy in the form of thermal energy and at least 20 percent of its total useful energy in the form of electrical or mechanical power (or a combination thereof) and would also be required to satisfy an energy-efficiency standard. For CHP systems with an electrical capacity in excess of 50 megawatts (or a mechanical energy capacity in excess of 67,000 horsepower), the total energy efficiency of the system would have to exceed 70 percent. For smaller systems, the total energy efficiency would have to exceed 60 percent. For this purpose, total energy efficiency would be calculated as the sum of the useful electrical, thermal, and mechanical power produced by the system at normal operating rates, measured on a Btu basis, divided by the lower heating value of the primary fuel source for the system supplied. The credit would be allowed with respect to qualified CHP property only if its eligibility is verified under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Investments in qualified CHP assets that are otherwise assigned cost recovery periods of less than 15 years would be eligible for the credit, provided that the taxpayer elected to treat such property as having a 22-year class life. Thus, regular tax depreciation allowances would be calculated using a 15-year recovery period and the 150 percent declining balance method.

The credit would be treated as energy property under the investment credit component of the section 38 general business credit, and would be subject to the rules and limitations governing such property. Taxpayers using the credit for CHP equipment would not be entitled to any other tax credit for the same equipment.

The credit would apply to investments in CHP equipment placed in service after December 31, 2001, but before January 1, 2007.

exploration activity, and production capacity. The tax incentives contained in present law address the drop in domestic exploratory drilling that has occurred since the mid-1950s and the continuing loss of production from mature fields and marginal properties.

Incentives for oil and gas production in the form of tax expenditures are estimated to total $9.8 billion for fiscal years 2002 through 2006.² They include the nonconventional fuels (i.e., oil produced from shale and tar sands, gas produced from geopressured brine, Devonian shale, coal seams, tight formations, or biomass, and synthetic fuel produced from coal) production credit ($2.4 billion), the enhanced oil recovery credit ($4.4 billion), the allowance of percentage depletion for independent producers and royalty owners, including increased percentage depletion for stripper wells ($2.3 billion), the exception from the passive loss limitation for working interests in oil and gas properties ($100 million), and the expensing of intangible drilling and development costs ($640 million). In addition to those tax expenditures, oil and gas activities have largely been eliminated from the alternative minimum tax. These provisions are described in detail below.

Certain costs incurred prior to drilling an oil- or gas-producing property are recovered through the depletion deduction. These include costs of acquiring the lease or other interest in the property, and geological and geophysical costs (in advance of actual drilling). Any taxpayer having an economic interest in a producing property may use the cost depletion method. Under this method, the basis recovery for a taxable year is proportional to the exhaustion of the property during the year. The cost depletion method does not permit cost recovery deductions that exceed the taxpayer's basis in the property or that are allowable on an accelerated basis. Thus, the deduction for cost depletion is not generally viewed as a tax incentive.

² Analytical Perspectives, Budget of the United States Government, Fiscal Year 2002, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC, 2001, p. 63. These estimates are measured on an Outlay equivalent basis. They show the amount of outlay that would be required to provide the taxpayer the same after-tax income as would be received through the tax preference. This outlay equivalent measure allows a comparison of the cost of the tax expenditure with that of a direct Federal outlay.

Independent producers and royalty owners (as contrasted to integrated oil companies)³ may qualify for percentage depletion. A qualifying taxpayer determines the depletion deduction for each oil or gas property under both the percentage depletion method and the cost depletion method and deducts the larger of the two amounts. Under the percentage depletion method, generally 15 percent of the taxpayer=s gross income from an oil- or gas-producing property is allowed as a deduction in each taxable year. The amount deducted may not exceed 100 percent of the net income from that property in any year (the Anet-income limitation=).⁴ Additionally, the percentage depletion deduction for all oil and gas properties may not exceed 65 percent of the taxpayer=s overall taxable income (determined before such deduction and adjusted for certain loss carrybacks and trust distributions).⁵

A taxpayer may claim percentage depletion with respect to up to 1,000 barrels of average daily production of domestic crude oil or an equivalent amount of domestic natural gas. For producers of both oil and natural gas, this limitation applies on a combined basis. All production owned by businesses under common control and members of the same family must be aggregated; each group is then treated as one producer for application of the 1,000-barrel limitation.

Special percentage depletion provisions apply to oil and gas production from marginal properties. The statutory percentage depletion rate is increased (from the general rate of 15 percent) by one percentage point for each whole dollar that the average price of crude oil (as determined under the provisions of the nonconventional fuels production credit of section 29) for ³ An independent producer is any producer who is not a Aretailer= or Arefiner.= A retailer is any person who directly, or through a related person, sells oil or natural gas or any product derived therefrom (1) through any retail outlet operated by the taxpayer or related person, or (2) to any person that is obligated to market or distribute such oil or natural gas (or product derived therefrom) under the name of the taxpayer or the related person, or that has the authority to occupy any retail outlet owned by the taxpayer or a related person. Bulk sales of crude oil and natural gas to commercial or industrial users, and bulk sales of aviation fuel to the Department of Defense, are not treated as retail sales for this purpose. Further, a person is not a retailer within the meaning of this provision if the combined gross receipts of that person and all related persons from the retail sale of oil, natural gas, or any product derived therefrom do not exceed $5 million for the taxable year. A refiner is any person who directly or through a related person engages in the refining of crude oil, but only if such person or related person has a refinery run in excess of 50,000 barrels per day on any day during the taxable year.

the immediately preceding calendar year is less than $20 per barrel. In no event may the rate of percentage depletion under this provision exceed 25 percent for any taxable year. The increased rate applies for the taxpayer=s taxable year which immediately follows a calendar year for which the average crude oil price falls below the $20 floor. To illustrate the application of this provision, the average price of a barrel of crude oil for calendar year 1999 was $15.56; thus, the percentage depletion rate for production from marginal wells was increased by four percent (to 19 percent) for taxable years beginning in 2000. The 100-percent-of-net-income limitation has been suspended for marginal wells for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1997, and before January 1, 2002.

Marginal production is defined for this purpose as domestic crude oil or domestic natural gas which is produced during any taxable year from a property which (1) is a stripper well property for the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, or (2) is a property substantially all of the production from which during such calendar year is heavy oil (i.e., oil that has a weighted average gravity of 20 degrees API or less corrected to 60 degrees Fahrenheit). A stripper well property is any oil or gas property for which daily average production per producing oil or gas well is not more than 15 barrel equivalents in the calendar year during which the taxpayer=s taxable year begins.⁶ A property qualifies as a stripper well property for a calendar year only if the wells on such property were producing during that period at their maximum efficient rate of flow.

If a taxpayer=s property consists of a partial interest in one or more oil- or gas-producing wells, the determination of whether the property is a stripper well property or a heavy oil property is made with respect to total production from such wells, including the portion of total production attributable to ownership interests other than the taxpayer=s. If the property satisfies the requirements of a stripper well property, then each owner receives the benefits of this provision with respect to its allocable share of the production from the property for its taxable year that begins during the calendar year in which the property so qualifies.

The allowance for percentage depletion on production from marginal oil and gas properties is subject to the 1,000-barrel-per-day limitation discussed above. Unless a taxpayer elects otherwise, marginal production is given priority over other production for purposes of utilization of that limitation.

Because percentage depletion, unlike cost depletion, is computed without regard to the taxpayer=s basis in the depletable property, cumulative depletion deductions may be far greater than the amount expended by the taxpayer to acquire or develop the property. The excess of the percentage depletion deduction over the deduction for cost depletion is generally viewed as a tax expenditure.

In general, costs that benefit future periods must be capitalized and recovered over such periods for income tax purposes, rather than being expensed in the period the costs are incurred. In addition, the uniform capitalization rules require certain direct and indirect costs allocable to property to be included in inventory or capitalized as part of the basis of such property. In general, the uniform capitalization rules apply to real and tangible personal property produced by the taxpayer or acquired for resale.

Special rules apply to intangible drilling and development costs (AIDCs⁷). Under these special rules, an operator (i.e., a person who holds a working or operating interest in any tract or parcel of land either as a fee owner or under a lease or any other form of contract granting working or operating rights) who pays or incurs IDCs in the development of an oil or gas property located in the United States may elect either to expense or capitalize those costs. The uniform capitalization rules do not apply to otherwise deductible IDCs.

If a taxpayer elects to expense IDCs, the amount of the IDCs is deductible as an expense in the taxable year the cost is paid or incurred. Generally, IDCs that a taxpayer elects to capitalize may be recovered through depletion or depreciation, as appropriate; or in the case of a nonproductive well (Adry hole⁸), the operator may elect to deduct the costs. In the case of an integrated oil company (i.e., a company that engages, either directly or through a related enterprise, in substantial retailing or refining activities) that has elected to expense IDCs, 30 percent of the IDCs on productive wells must be capitalized and amortized over a 60-month

⁷ IDCs include all expenditures made by an operator for wages, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc., incident to and necessary for the drilling of wells and the preparation of wells for the production of oil and gas. In addition, IDCs include the cost to operators of any drilling or development work (excluding amounts payable only out of production or gross or net proceeds from production, if the amounts are depletable income to the recipient, and amounts properly allocable to the cost of depreciable property) done by contractors under any form of contract (including a turnkey contract). Such work includes labor, fuel, repairs, hauling, and supplies which are used in the drilling, shooting, and cleaning of wells; in such clearing of ground, draining, road making, surveying, and geological works as are necessary in preparation for the drilling of wells; and in the construction of such derricks, tanks, pipelines, and other physical structures as are necessary for the drilling of wells and the preparation of wells for the production of oil and gas. Generally, IDCs do not include expenses for items which have a salvage value (such as pipes and casings) or items which are part of the acquisition price of an interest in the property.

A taxpayer that has elected to deduct IDCs may, nevertheless, elect to capitalize and amortize certain IDCs over a 60-month period beginning with the month the expenditure was paid or incurred. This rule applies on an expenditure-by-expenditure basis; that is, for any particular taxable year, a taxpayer may deduct some portion of its IDCs and capitalize the rest under this provision. This allows the taxpayer to reduce or eliminate IDC adjustments or preferences under the alternative minimum tax.

⁸ The IRS has ruled that if an integrated oil company ceases to be an integrated oil company, it may not immediately write off the unamortized portion of the IDCs capitalized under this rule, but instead must continue to amortize those IDCs over the 60-month amortization period.

The election to deduct IDCs applies only to those IDCs associated with domestic properties.⁹ For this purpose, the United States includes certain wells drilled offshore.¹⁰

Intangible drilling costs are a major portion of the costs necessary to locate and develop oil and gas reserves. Because the benefits obtained from these expenditures are of value throughout the life of the project, these costs would be capitalized and recovered over the period of production under generally applicable accounting principles. The acceleration of the deduction for IDCs is viewed as a tax expenditure.

Nonconventional fuels production credit

Taxpayers that produce certain qualifying fuels from nonconventional sources are eligible for a tax credit (Athe section 29 credit≡) equal to $3 per barrel or barrel-of-oil equivalent.¹¹ Fuels qualifying for the credit must be produced domestically from a well drilled, or a facility treated as placed in service before January 1, 1993.¹² The section 29 credit generally is available for qualified fuels sold to unrelated persons before January 1, 2003.¹³

⁹ In the case of IDCs paid or incurred with respect to an oil or gas well located outside of the United States, the costs, at the election of the taxpayer, are either (1) included in adjusted basis for purposes of computing the amount of any deduction allowable for cost depletion or (2) capitalized and amortized ratably over a 10-year period beginning with the taxable year such costs were paid or incurred.

¹⁰ The term AUnited States≡ for this purpose includes the seabed and subsoil of those submerged lands that are adjacent to the territorial waters of the United States and over which the United States has exclusive rights, in accordance with international law, with respect to the exploration and exploitation of natural resources (i.e., the Continental Shelf area).

¹¹ A barrel-of-oil equivalent generally means that amount of the qualifying fuel which has a Btu (British thermal unit) content of 5.8 million.

¹² A facility that produces gas from biomass or produces liquid, gaseous, or solid synthetic fuels from coal (including lignite) generally will be treated as being placed in service before January 1, 1993, if it is placed in service by the taxpayer before July 1, 1998, pursuant to a written binding contract in effect before January 1, 1997. In the case of a facility that produces coke or coke gas, however, this provision applies only if the original use of the facility commences with the taxpayer. Also, the IRS has ruled that production from certain post-1992 Arecompletions≡ of wells that were originally drilled prior to the expiration date of the credit would qualify for the section 29 credit.

For purposes of the credit, qualified fuels include: (1) oil produced from shale and tar sands; (2) gas produced from geopressured brine, Devonian shale, coal seams, a tight formation, or biomass (i.e., any organic material other than oil, natural gas, or coal (or any product thereof); and (3) liquid, gaseous, or solid synthetic fuels produced from coal (including lignite), including such fuels when used as feedstocks. The amount of the credit is determined without regard to any production attributable to a property from which gas from Devonian shale, coal seams, geopressured brine, or a tight formation was produced in marketable quantities before 1980.

The amount of the section 29 credit generally is adjusted by an inflation adjustment factor for the calendar year in which the sale occurs.¹⁴ There is no adjustment for inflation in the case of the credit for sales of natural gas produced from a tight formation. The credit begins to phase out if the annual average unregulated wellhead price per barrel of domestic crude oil exceeds $23.50 multiplied by the inflation adjustment factor.¹⁵

The amount of the section 29 credit allowable with respect to a project is reduced by any unrecaptured business energy tax credit or enhanced oil recovery credit claimed with respect to such project.

As with most other credits, the section 29 credit may not be used to offset alternative minimum tax liability. Any unused section 29 credit generally may not be carried back or forward to another taxable year; however, a taxpayer receives a credit for prior year minimum tax liability to the extent that a section 29 credit is disallowed as a result of the operation of the alternative minimum tax. The credit is limited to what would have been the regular tax liability but for the alternative minimum tax.

The provision provides a significant tax incentive (currently about $6 per barrel of oil equivalent or $1 per thousand cubic feet of natural gas). Coalbed methane and gas from tight formations currently account for most of the credit.

Enhanced oil recovery credit

Taxpayers are permitted to claim a general business credit, which consists of several different components. One component of the general business credit is the enhanced oil recovery credit. The general business credit for a taxable year may not exceed the excess (if any) of the taxpayer's net income tax over the greater of (1) the tentative minimum tax, or (2) 25 percent of so much of the taxpayer's net regular tax liability as exceeds $25,000. Any unused general

¹⁴ The inflation adjustment factor for the 2000 taxable year was 2.0454. Therefore, the inflation-adjusted amount of the credit for that year was $6.14 per barrel or barrel equivalent.

Although it does not say so (probably on purpose), the invite we received for a "Summer Soiree" on 7/28 is really from the lobbying group American Continental Group, which sells itself as specializing in access to the Executive Branch. Beware.

My DOJ contacts depend on the issue.

For the Garza clemency issue and anything death-penalty-related, I talk to either Johnny Sutton or David Laufman (COS) in the Deputy Attorney General's office.

For the stem-cell litigation and anything else HHS-related, I talk to Brian Miller in the Deputy AG's office.

For race-based admissions issues, I talked to Adam, Alex Acosta and Jim Ho, and Paul Clement.

For the ERISA/Patients' Bill of Rights issue that we discussed at our mtg this a.m., I've talked to Paul Clement.

When I have a random civil-litigation-related issues and I don't know whom to call, I talk to Phil Perry.

I also talk to various people in the commercial litigation branch (career lawyers) about energy issues.

There are probably things I'm forgetting too.

Like Rachel, my contacts depend upon the particular issue. For the tobacco litigation, I call Dan Levin. On the labor litigation, I talk with the career litigator at Civil Programs, Neil Koslowe, who is counsel of record.

I think we should be very careful, however, not to start creating programmatic systems simply at the behest of Diana Schacht/DPC. If information flow is a problem, I think it should be handled primarily through Cabinet Affairs, with any necessary additional communication from DOJ to WHCO.

P.S. As Noel suggested, the Judge has already worked through the larger issue of the format of communications between DOJ and WHCO. That framework is that DOJ provides us with oral, informal descriptions of their proposed course of action in a particular matter. Depending on how we feel about that information, we say little to nothing (if we like it) or express concerns (if we don't). Let's not reinvent this wheel either.

I share your outrage, Courtney, at this (sadly unsurprising) sloughing off of the sacred.

The good news is at least they can still meet in Milford, New York (for now!).

The All Or Nothing Approach
School District Bans Student Clubs Rather Than Allow Christian Club
Associated Press

An Orange County high school district banned non-curriculum clubs from its campuses rather than allow the establishment of a Christian club. The action resulted from a lawsuit settlement by Saddleback Valley Unified School District, which agreed to exclude student clubs rather than allow a chapter of Fellowship of Christian Athletes on one of its campuses. The clubs will have to meet before or after school, and can no longer use campus bulletin boards or other school outlets to solicit members or publicize meetings, Bill Manahan, the school district superintendent, said Thursday.

They used to list last year's salary and home address, too. We had a sanitized version prepared for us. If they still list ethnicity and marital status, we might want to see if Sheila Joy can e-mail us the files so we can edit them.

Re the binders for distribution to the supporter groups on Monday:

What are your thoughts on including the DOJ-created resume for each candidate? The only thing that gives me pause is that these documents list marital status and ethnicity. Do we want to distribute that information?

Susan:
I don't know whether an individual (as opposed to the PAC) can pay for the plane. You'll have to get sign-off from Moose on that.

The regulation that we normally use for political travel allows for payment to be made by PACs and campaign committees only. Moose will know if there is some other rule that allows for this.

I had submitted the paperwork for this Friday's trip thinking that Gilmore's PAC was going to be paying for the charter. Was just advised that they have secured an individual donor for the plane.

REV_00127766

Here's what I know:

The King Air plane is privately owned by Cliff Harrup.

Cliff owns and operates a company called Central Virginia Aviation which is a charter plane company.

Cliff will be one of the two pilots flying Karl to Hot Springs.

When I get the fax confirming this information, I will send it to you. Do you want me to complete REVISED forms, or can you just change the info?

Sorry for the late scramble on this.

You suggested that we add references to our guidance memos and to the Staff Manual in our explanation of the ethics training. After examining those sources, I am of the opinion we should not add them. The first is quite general and the second, because it is designed to scare staffers away from the legal line, contains a good bit of loose language. I would not want to encourage Waxman to refer to these sources instead of the actual regulations that governed Karl's conduct. The issue must be whether there was any violation of law, not whether there was any arguable or apparent violation of broadly-worded or extra-cautious internal policies. Let me know if you disagree.

We have recommended against this type of activity for our employees.
There can be an appearance of or - depending on the circumstances - an actual use of public office for private gain. I want to emphasize that the decision is up to DOE.

Do you have any thoughts with regard to this? thanks

The Secretary received a request from the College Republicans National Committee asking him to donate something for the College Republicans Silent Auction. DOEd sent the request to their lawyers/ethics office, who recommended that it was probably not a good idea and suggested declining the request. Terry would like to know if we have any ethical guidance, if other Cabinet Members have received similar requests, and if so, how have they responded?

Hi Brett! Just wanted to touch base (I think one of our volunteers, Lisa Vogt, called you) to see if we can get a memo on the dos and don'ts of Larry Lindsey appearing at political events. We know that he cannot use (and neither can the group) his official title. Nor can he fundraise. But we're trying to put together some clear guidance for him on a variety of events.

Your guidance, as always, is tremendously appreciated.

Subject: 2d Circuit New York vacancy

Contrary to my representation at the staff meeting this morning, there will be a vacancy in the Second Circuit from New York this year. Judge Pierre Leval is eligible for senior status on 9/4/01 and has indicated to close associates that he intends to take it. I recommend that we begin working this vacancy immediately so that we are in a position to make a nomination shortly after the seat comes open. I will be happy to work the vacancy unless others are interested, in which case the Judge and Tim can make an assignment.

The Honorable Michael G. Oxley
Chairman
Committee on Financial Services
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I understand that your Committee is scheduled to mark up H.R. 1408, the Financial Services Antifraud Network Act of 2001, which the Subcommittee on Financial Institutions and Consumer Credit reported on June 13. The Treasury Department supports the unquestioned goal of sharing information between Federal and State financial regulators to combat fraud.

The Treasury Department would appreciate your consideration of the following changes to the bill prior to the Committee markup:

- (1) Locate the authority to develop, implement, and maintain the network with the Secretary of the Treasury or his designee. We are concerned that the President's Working Group on Financial Markets is not the best location for the antifraud network. As the major policy adviser to the President on economic and financial issues, and in light of the fact that the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN) and the United States Secret Service both have significant antifraud responsibilities and experience, the Treasury Department should have a coordinating role in combating fraudulent practices which undermine the economy.
- (2) Require that access to the information available on the network be limited to those regulators that participate. We believe that the ability to participate in the network should be conditioned on an entity's willingness to supply information to other network participants. We also believe that, subject to appropriate privacy and other protections, participants should be able to receive the quality of data that they provide, e.g., they should not be able to receive information if they withhold such data from other network participants.
- (3) Provide adequate appropriations. While we strongly support the goals of this legislation, we believe that implementing this bill will require resources adequate to the important task envisioned in the legislation.
- (4) Provide parallel privacy safeguards for information under the bill. We believe that the privacy protections contained elsewhere in the bill also should apply to any information that is shared under Subtitle A of Title I.

Thank you for your consideration of these issues. We stand ready to work with you and the Committee to advance the important goal of combating financial fraud.

The Office of Management and Budget advised that there is no objection to the presentation of this report from the standpoint of the Administration's legislative program.

Sincerely,

David D. Aufhauser
General Counsel

12 (3) NOTIFICATION AND RESPONSE.—If a finan-

13 able to the public over the Internet.

14 (B) FACTORS FOR DETERMINATION.—The
15 Subcommittee shall make the determination
16 under subparagraph (A) on an ongoing basis,
17 considering both short-term costs and techno-
18 logical limitations, as well as the need for long-19 term comprehensive coverage, and other appro-20 priate factors.

21 (C) STATE SUPERVISORS.—It is the sense
